Saturday's 'Grand Reunion' will be a gathering to remember

By SCOTT BREARTON

IT'S BEEN more than 50 years since an excited group of teen-agers walked up the Ocean Avenue hill in anticipation of the opening day of Carmel High School in September 1940.

Now, 54 years later, 300 former CHS classmates – and their guests – from Canada, Alaska, Hawaii and throughout the continental United States will gather at noon on Saturday at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club for The Grand Reunion – a reunion for those who graduated from 1941 to 1949. A barbecue will begin at 3 p.m. and the reunion will continue into the evening, according to organizers.

"This is a celebration of the great years," said Pete Thatcher, chairman of The Grand Reunion and a 1942 CHS graduate. "It was a special and unique period of time in the lives of these individuals."

Pete Thatcher

One year after the 1940 opening of CHS, the U.S. entered World War II, Thatcher recalled. Many military families arrived in Carmel to live through the war years while fathers were sent overseas.

"Friendships were special and supportive," Thatcher reflected. "The war influenced lives, education, relationships and future endeavors."

Classmates graduated and some went to war, he noted. But in some way, they all embraced the world and made a difference in their chosen endeavors. Some chose to stay in the Carmel area – entrepreneurs, doctors, dentists, engi-

OSCAR WEIGHS an easy 1,000 pounds.

He's very intelligent — a gentle giant. But despite his wonderful disposition, it isn't easy for Paula and Dean West of Carmel Valley to find a babysitter for the 5-year-old pig they dearly love.

"It's difficult to find someone to take care of barnyard animals," Paula said.

It isn't easy unless you call Lucinda Andersen, founder of Happy Pets At-Home Pet Sitting Service.

"Lucinda did an excellent job," Paula said. A lot of folks agree.

Andersen, a native of Denver, Colo., started Happy Pets five years ago, just about the time Oscar was one week old.

"I was hiking with my best girlfriend in Garland Park," Andersen recalled. "I said, 'I'm thinking of starting my own business and calling it Happy Pets. What do you think?' She thought it was a great idea."

The idea followed a decision to quit working as a sales director for Kit Parker Films. The company was moving its corporate offices to San Francisco. Andersen had previously lived in the city after college, but did not want to return.

In 1989, Happy Pets had 10 clients. Today, more than 100 people rely on Andersen's home-care services. For $12 a visit, pets continue their normal routine of diet, medication and exercise, including playing, petting and loving.

"I match my schedule with the client's schedule," Andersen said. "I'm on call 24 hours a day; whatever the client wants."

Working from 7:30 a.m. almost daily throughout the summer, Andersen takes care of a wide range of pets from cats and dogs to a boa constrictor and an iguana.

"I took care of the boa only because he was shedding his skin," she noted. "The owner told me he doesn't eat during this time. Otherwise, I couldn't do it. He eats rats — I also take care of pet rats."

Then there was the time a client asked Andersen to take two 13-year-old German Shepherds to McDonald's every night for two weeks. "I had to buy

Moratorium may signal new period of water scarcity

■ The Paralta Well bought the peninsula time — but little else.

By PAUL WOLF

AS THE county has reluctantly imposed a moratorium on new development in the unincorporated areas, the Monterey Peninsula as a whole has learned two lessons.

First, how little water the new Paralta Well actually provided; second, how quickly a region can find itself back in the same old predicament.

'It was not the four or five years that we thought the water would last. It was more like two years. But there are really no surprises here.'

— Jim Cofer
general manager, MPWMD

"It was not the four or five years that we thought the water would last," said Jim Cofer, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD). "It was more like two years. But there are really no surprises here."

Ironically, as the Monterey County Board of Supervisors acted Tuesday to place a moratorium on new development applications, the well in Seaside was not even producing water yet. It is scheduled to go on line later this year.

But each of the jurisdictions had already been apportioned its own share of the 308 acre-foot water pie. While the county has exhausted nearly all of its Paralta allocation, a number of the cities soon will find themselves in the same fix.

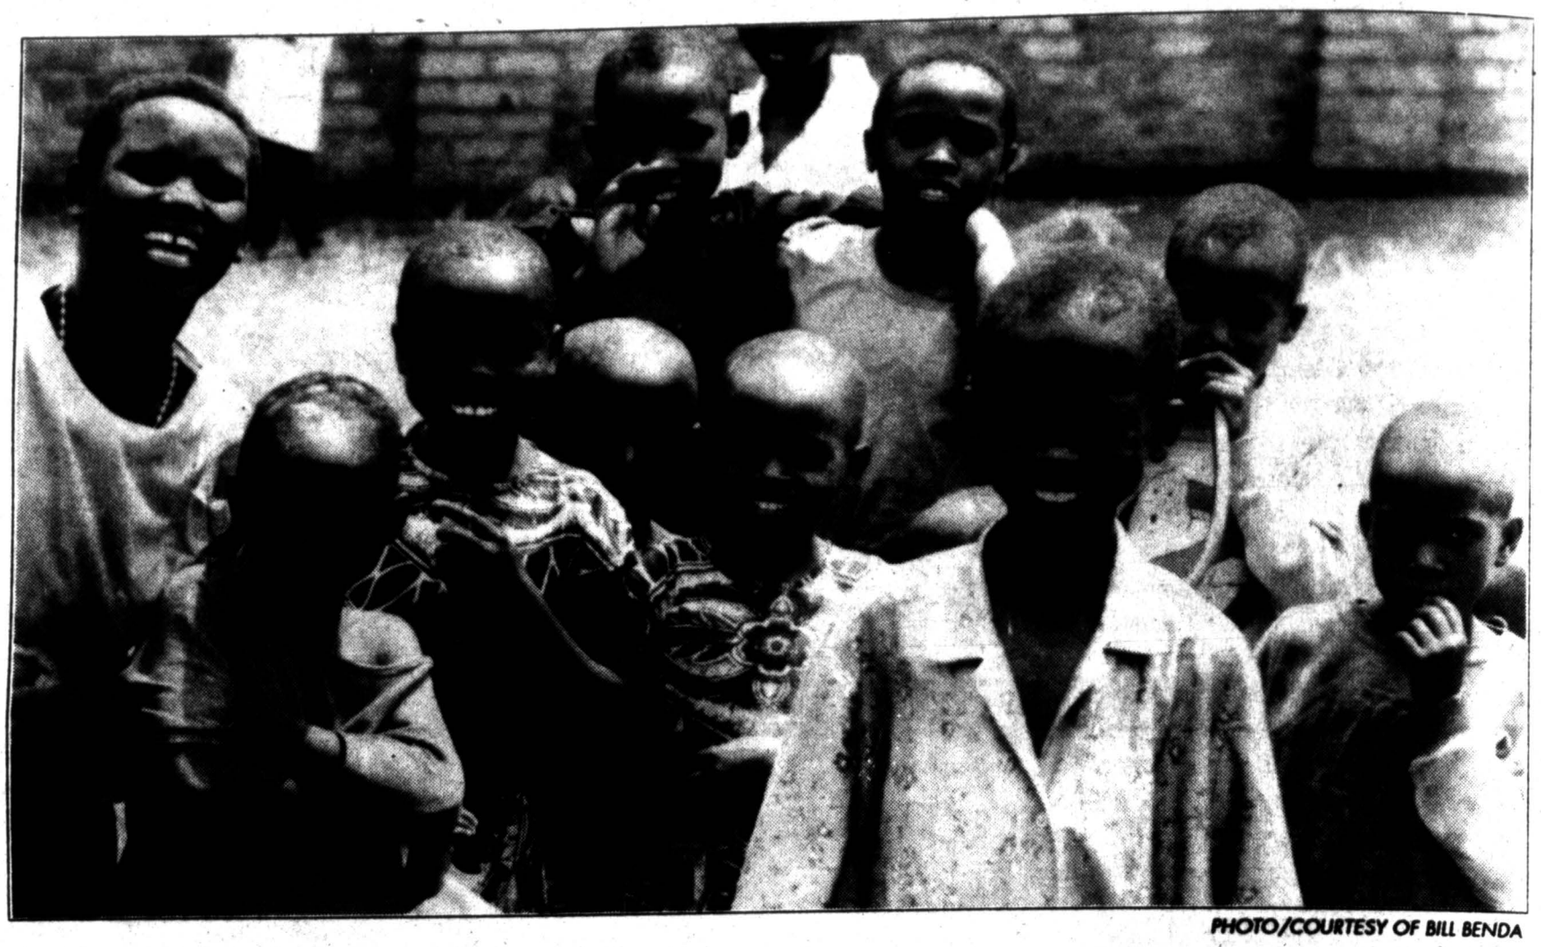

"The entire peninsula will have to take similar action as the county did," said Steven Maki, senior planner for Monterey County.

Carmel, according to city officials, may be just slightly better off — with roughly 18 months left on its

Carmel doctor is learning art of acceptance after stint in Rwanda

In spite of their suffering, orphans in Rwanda muster a smile for the camera. Dr. Bill Benda of Carmel Valley recently returned from a one-month assignment there.

IF THERE'S one thing Bill Benda learned after serving as a doctor in Rwanda for a month, it's that one man can only do so much.

The Carmel doctor returned from his trip to East Africa about three weeks ago and is still reeling from the experience. The humble, quiet man is quick to note he is not seeking publicity.

"I don't want to sound like some sort of hero or special person," said Benda, a 40-year-old former emergency room doctor at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. "I like that people know what I did, and I appreciate it. But I'm a little embarrassed, too."

Benda left CHOMP last January for a sabbatical. On July 19, he departed for eastern Rwanda after he was invited by a French organization called Médicins Du Monde ("Doctors of the World") to work in Gahini, a tiny village with a hospital, orphanage and houses to support medical staff. There, he helped care for some 70,000 refugees in Murambi and Kayonza, two neighboring refugee camps.

Dr. Bill Benda, who recently returned from a one-month assignment in Rwanda, enjoys relaxing after breakfast with Katy, his golden lab.

The Carmel Valley resident joined three other foreigners already there – two nurses and a logistician whose charge was taking care of water supply measures and mechanical problems. Benda noted the hospital in Gahini was in disrepair, with broken windows and a massive hole in the roof where a mortar shell had landed.

According to Benda, Doctors of the World invited him because they felt an American would be more welcome than a Frenchman, since the French had supported the government recently ousted by rebel forces. Their concerns turned out to be unfounded, he said.

Benda had a tough assignment, he explained, as he paused over a photograph of an 11-year-old boy whose legs had been nearly shredded apart from hand grenade shrapnel. He said the type of medical care the boy needed simply was not available in Rwanda.

"This kid would need some major reconstructive surgery by a plastic surgeon in a major hospital-type setting," Benda said. "They don't have the operating room, they don't have the tools. The hospital is full of things like that. People paralyzed from their injuries...a lot of third-degree burns."

"Not too many doctors want to do this kind of work," he added, noting they may be tied to their offices and their families. "I think most doctors would feel an overriding responsibility toward the people back home. I didn't have that."

Treating injuries resulting from violence is nothing

BEV'S LOVE MADE IT ALL POSSIBLE

Animals, customers feel void at Wash-A-Pet

By SUSAN BECK

WASH-A-PET was Bev's baby.

"It was her love," said Judy Peiken, co-owner of the Pacific Grove business.

Six years ago, Beverly Ann Strack, along with Peiken and Lois Varner, opened Wash-A-Pet, where peninsulans can bathe their own animals. In July, Beverly, 59, died of complications after surgery.

"With Bev gone, it will never be the same for us," Peiken added. "We are thinking of selling Wash-A-Pet. You just can't imagine how we miss her."

It was Varner who came up with the idea of providing a wash-your-pet business, said Peiken, children's librarian for Harrison Memorial Library Branch in Carmel.

Varner has a dog named Lady. Years ago, Lady's skin allergies were so severe that she would dig and scratch herself raw.

"We didn't know what to do," said Peiken, who has shared a home with Beverly and Varner for the past eight years. "Nothing worked."

Varner finally took Lady to a veterinarian in Watsonville, who had an animal bathing facility at his business. The veterinarian told her to bathe Lady every week with medicated soap and use a moisturizer for dry skin.

Beverly Strack

"It worked beautifully," Peiken recalled. "Varner said, 'Why don't we do this?' None of us had ever been in business before."

With help from Peiken's uncle, a contractor, Wash-A-Pet opened in October 1988 at its 167 Central Ave. location.

Took charge

Since both Peiken and Varner, director of nursing at Ave Maria Nursing Hospital, have careers, Beverly took charge of Wash-A-Pet.

"Bev knew everyone and their pets by name," Peiken said. "She truly brought love to the business. A day doesn't go by without someone asking about Bev. It will take a long time to adjust."

Nancy Hardin of Carmel regularly takes 12-year-old Peaches to Wash-A-Pet for special grooming care.

Peiken fondly recalled the love-hate relationship between one of her sons, Jeffrey, and Beverly.

"Bev was a perfectionist," Peiken said. Jeffrey, who worked at Wash-A-Pet, was "a little less than perfect."

Beverly left notes for Jeffrey, listing what he hadn't done, or hadn't done just right. "Sometimes Jeffrey expressed displeasure about her requests," Peiken added. "But after she died, he called to tell me he'd found her last note to him. He did everything on the list, perfectly."

Then there's Heidi, the dog who ran away from home every day to visit Beverly, or the numerous feral cats she always fed, Peiken remembered.

"Bev was wonderful," Peiken noted. "She always said, 'Animals bring out the best in people.'"

Loving memory

In memory of Beverly, Peiken and Varner established the Bev Strack Feral Cat Fund through the SPCA of Monterey County.

Whereas the SPCA formerly only neutered domestic cats, it will now neuter feral cats if they are being fed on a regular basis, Peiken said. The feral cats also will be tested for leukemia.

If Wash-A-Pet is sold, both Peiken and Varner hope the new owner will be as friendly and caring as Beverly.

"People say to me, 'Well, Bev didn't do it that way,'" Peiken said. "Just the other day, a man came to wash his dog. I asked him what his name was. He took a step back and said, 'It's been years since I've had to tell anyone who I was in this place.'"

Although Peiken observed that Beverly always looked up to her because she had earned a master's degree and also admired Varner for her status in the business world, "It is Bev, always shy and retiring, who people remember."

them each a hamburger or cheeseburger. I alternated their choice and ate the French fries and drank the Coke," she recalled. "And I never go to McDonald's."

Serious business

Andersen is a member of the National Association of Pet Sitters (NAPS), which advocates quality care, safety and well-being for animals at all times.

"I thought I had an original idea," said Andersen, who soon discovered there are 600 NAPS members across the county.

"I always require an interview so that the client and their animals can decide if they are going to like me, which they always do," she added. "I have an affinity for animals. They are little furry angels. They teach me compassion and to live in the moment."

In addition to pet sitting, Andersen also trains dogs. She worked with the Del Monte Kennel Club for several years and recently took an animal acting class to learn how to train animals for commercials and movies.

"When I was a little girl, I always wanted to do obedience work and train animals," she remembered. "My first dog was Tammy. She was my shadow until I was 5. In 1986, I got my first standard poodle. That's when I started learning how to train dogs."

Today, Andersen's shadow is Jazzmine, also a standard poodle. She goes along for the ride and often proves to be great company for other dogs while their owners are away, Andersen said.

"Animals need companionship," she noted. "If left alone too long, cats will curl up in their litter boxes. They become depressed. I won't accept a job if a client only wants me to stop by on Monday, then again on Saturday, unless someone else is visiting the other days in between."

Takes work seriously

Andersen takes her work seriously. She make suggestions about pet care and diet and has two local veterinarians — Dr. Frank Kocher and Dr. Susan Klopfer — who are available to answer any questions she may have about a client's pet.

"My goal is to have a complete pet service," she said. "One-stop shopping."

But if someone can't afford personal home care, Andersen highly recommends placing animals in a reputable kennel, or asking friends to visit pets on a daily basis.

When Andersen went on a trip last year, she realized what her clients go through when they leave their pets with her.

"I truly understand and share their concerns," she said. "I love what I do. I play with animals all day. It's not work. I'm very fortunate."

Need for mandatory sprinklers in new homes debated

■ Thodos speaks from personal experience when it comes to push for passage of ordinance.

By PAUL WOLF

PLANNING COMMISSIONS tend to study issues in the abstract. But, when it comes to mandatory sprinklers for new homes, one commissioner in particular has strong opinions based on personal experience.

John Thodos plans to rally the support for mandatory sprinklers with new construction — and no one more than Thodos can say why it is a worthwhile regulation.

On May 12, his award-winning "Glass House" on Scenic Road was gutted by a fire that began in the laundry room. John and Judy are still haggling with insurance people, but it is their intention to rebuild the structure exactly as it was.

This time, however, they will include a sprinkler system.

They've learned a lesson, John Thodos says. They do not wish to endanger their own property or that of others.

"I want to see if we can get an ordinance passed," he said. "People have to realize it is a myth that it is too expensive to require sprinklers with new construction."

There are bound to be some people to challenge Thodos on that point.

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, at a planning commission meeting focusing on 1994 Draft Housing Element, Sheryl McKenzie, speaking on behalf of the Carmel Association of Realtors, argued sprinkler programs should be voluntary, not mandatory. "It seems like a burden to mandate them," McKenzie said.

She argued the best approach would be to educate those in the construction field about the value of sprinklers — and let them make up their own minds.

McKenzie said the cost of such a mandate would be about $4,000 to $5,000 for each home, but Thodos believed her estimate was "exaggerated." The commissioner said the range would be $2,000 to $4,000.

In a telephone interview with The Carmel Pine Cone, Thodos said, "We are talking about human lives here. They (the Realtors) want to be able to sell homes a little quicker because it may cost a few thousand dollars less. That is not good judgment."

The adjacent homes to the north and south of the Thodos' residence sustained relative minor damage. According to the commissioner, had there been a stronger wind on that Thursday evening, several homes would have been lost.

According to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth, the revision of the housing element is a good place to begin discussing the issue. "Because we have

Planning commissioner claims short-term rental law ill-conceived

By PAUL WOLF

Marshall Hydorn

CARMEL RESIDENTS and city officials have stood by it. The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld it. And, over the past year, the city attorney has prosecuted its violators.

The city law barring short-term housing rentals in Carmel may never be universally admired. But it has quickly become a cornerstone ordinance written to preserve Carmel's residential character.

All this aside, planning commissioner Marshall Hydorn told his commission colleagues on Wednesday, Aug. 31, that its premise — that homes rented fewer than 30 days erode village ambience — is ill-conceived.

"Carmel is not a bedroom community," he said. "If you want a suburb, go to San Jose. Carmel has always had this vitalizing influence — of artists, of people coming here, enjoying the town. Planting the seed for future own water allocation.

Meanwhile, Carmel Valley is the part of the county most affected by the supervisors' action, as most of the unincorporated area is built-out.

Buying time

It was the Paralta Well that last year allowed the MPWMD to lift a two-year-old peninsula-wide moratorium on new water connections.

The county was simply the first jurisdiction to commit its share, in part because it uses a conservative method of recording its water use, according to Sam Karas, 5th District Monterey County supervisor.

"During the last moratorium, there was a lot of waiting for this water (from Paralta), and it didn't provide that much anyway," said Jim Hughes, chairman of the MPWMD water board.

Did Paralta merely buy the peninsula some time?

It is generally agreed there are few, if any, promising near-term water-supply projects available.

The MPWMD has failed to garner enough public support for desalination. For the moment, prospects for wells and deep-rock drilling appear dim.

And, as the MPWMD is under scrutiny for possible illegal pumping in the Carmel River, the state appears unlikely to approve 150 acre feet of development water from the new Pebble Beach Reclamation Project.

"There simply are no new water supplies out there," said Maki, who frequently serves on the multi-jurisdictional Technical Advisory Committee.

Hughes recognized the small hope that the Paralta well could prove more productive than originally anticipated.

According to Cofer, because the proposed New Los Padres Dam would not be operational until the year 2002, it is an open question what the district can furnish in the interim.

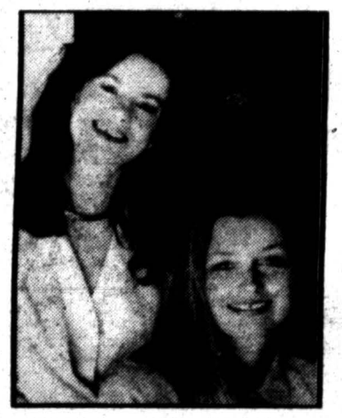

As far as the county in general and Carmel Valley in particular are concerned, those projects that have already gone through the process will move forward into 1995. Those that have not started the planning process, however, are stuck.

The board of supervisors is scheduled to revisit the moratorium on Oct. 11. According to Karas, the county intends to explore a few avenues:

- The county will receive a "complete report" in 45 days from county staff on whether the county water categories can be redistributed to open up a door for new applications.

For example, the county has a pool of 12 acre feet reserved for low-income housing "that is just sitting there," the supervisor explained.

- The board has petitioned the MPWMD to consider making available some of its regional-benefit water — water normally intended for multi-jurisdictional projects. "I have a feeling," Cofer told The Carmel Pine Cone, "that our board is going to be very reluctant to do that."
- Karas hopes to explore the possibility of earning more "credits" for water savings, particularly from retrofitting programs.

Could pitch canker disease throw wrench in PB development plans?

By PAUL WOLF

NO DECISION on the fate of the Pebble Beach Co.'s proposed subdivisions and golf course would be well thought-out until the decision makers understand the insidious pine disease known as pitch canker.

So explained Sam Karas, 5th District Monterey County Supervisor, who conveyed his message at Tuesday's board of supervisors meeting.

When county decision makers, including the supervisors, tackle the coming phases of the permit process, they will need to understand the consequences of removing some 57,000 Monterey Pines.

"If we are not supposed to replant, how do you mitigate a project like this," Karas told The Carmel Pine Cone, noting that seedlings are especially disease-prone. "We have to be sure that nothing is left for doubt — that we can answer all questions."

There are reports that pitch canker already has affected the Del Monte Forest, as well as numerous locations on the peninsula, including Carmel.

Supervisors heard a report from a University of California scientist, Thomas Gordon, about the fungal disease. They also heard from Carmel City Forester Gary Kelly, who has become a leader among regional tree experts in seeking a solution to the incurable disease.

Kelly also distributed flyers announcing an all-day workshop on pitch canker, scheduled for Oct. 5 at Sunset Center Theater in Carmel.

Looking for answers

Meanwhile, Kelly is not expecting speedy answers.

The forester and other officials helped UC scientists develop a grant proposal for a five-year study aimed at finding a disease-resistant pine strain.

"We know that they are out there," Kelly said.

The grant proposal asked for $500,000 — to be granted in installments over the five-year period, Kelly said.

The forester said he is not sure what agency, or combination of agencies, would sponsor such a project.

He explained that the current UC study, funded by the California Department of Forestry, has addressed only the characteristics and geography of the disease.

CV attorney/surfer helps give Surfrider Foundation bite

By SCOTT BREARTON

FROM BEHIND the wheel of his 1969 Oldsmobile Delta 88, covered with surf stickers and dust, Alexander Henson gets out – clad in suit and tie – and reports for work at his law office in Carmel Valley Village.

If you thought the 46-year-old attorney would show up in a Beemer or Benz, think again. Zan Henson isn't in it for the prestige.

Henson has worked on the board of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the Surfrider Foundation since its inception about four years ago. Today, there are more than 75 members in the local chapter. He was appointed its vice president three months ago under chapter president Mark Kintz, a longtime surfer and local accountant.

Zan Henson

"I'm the power behind the throne," Henson joked.

He began surfing 34 years ago, when "there was only one old guy who surfed" at Sunset Beach, his backyard spot in Southern California. While he is the first to note his favorite sport has changed a lot since he started, Henson still finds the time to hit the water at least three times a week.

The father of three children – all-sixth generation Californians – Henson practices general litigation with an emphasis on environment, business and divorce. He joined Surfrider after a series of sewage spills at Lovers Point in Pacific Grove left him feeling as though he wanted to use his legal skills to help make a difference.

"I do environmental cases – a lot of them," Henson noted. "Part of the reason for joining Surfrider was so I would learn more and be of help."

But Henson noted Monterey County is fortunate to not have the kinds of environmental problems plaguing coastal areas in Southern California and Humboldt County – where Surfrider Foundation emerged victorious in a multimillion dollar landmark lawsuit against a pulp mill.

Nationally, the Surfrider Foundation recently initiated the Blue Water Task Force. According to Henson, it is a program in which various chapter members serve as watchdogs to local government agencies, testing the waters at area beaches for coliform bacteria. Its other purpose is to begin sampling and testing where none have yet been conducted.

Water sampling underway

More than a year since its inception, local Blue Water Task Force volunteers – under the leadership of its chairman Aaspet Jordan – have tested samples from many peninsula locations, including Carmel River State Beach, Carmel Beach, Stillwater Cove and Spanish Bay in Pebble Beach, Asilomar State Beach and Lover's Point in Pacific Grove and Del Monte Beach inside Monterey Bay.

"All of our tests – with the exception of one at Asilomar – have come back clean," Henson noted. "If not clean, certainly below any threshold level of concern."

Carmel Valley attorney Zan Henson also serves as vice president of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the Surfrider Foundation.

Jordan said he would like to conduct the tests on a monthly basis, but because the operation depends on volunteers, the task force has recently fallen behind. He said anyone who suspects a problem or feels that an area should be checked out can call the local hotline: 655-1833.

"More than anything else, we want people's input, their involvement," Jordan said, noting volunteers are reimbursed for all costs associated with their work.

Another big project underway is a stenciling project in which storm drains throughout Monterey County are "tagged" with the message: "No Dumping — Flows to Bay." Its purpose is to increase community awareness about why used crankcase oil, household cleansers and other toxic substances should not be dumped down storm drains.

According to Henson, volunteers have tagged about one-half of all storm drains in Monterey so far, and are beginning to make a dent in the cities of Salinas, Sand City, Seaside and Carmel.

Volunteers will meet at 9 a.m. behind Monterey City Hall on Saturday, Oct. 15 for the next round of storm drain stenciling there. Henson said volunteers are always needed, whether or not they are members of Surfrider.

The Monterey Bay Chapter of Surfrider also has written letters in support of a grant application submitted by the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG). Henson said the grant would enable Surfrider to stencil all storm drains in Carmel Valley, in addition to those in coastal cities.

Renewal of Laguna Seca use permit stirs opposition

By PAUL WOLF

FOR YEARS and without hassle, the operator of Laguna Seca Raceway has had its concession agreement renewed. This year, there promises to be more than the usual amount of opposition.

At 10:15 a.m. Tuesday, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors is scheduled to hold a public hearing on the use permit currently held by SCRAMP, or the Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula.

"I don't think there is any danger of this use permit being removed," said 5th District Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas.

A public hearing on the use permit for Laguna Seca Raceway, shown above from an aerial view, will be held Tuesday morning at the board of supervisors meeting.

Nevertheless, there is an organization, fed up with noise and clogged roadways, that hopes to get some of the terms for special events rewritten, according to Mike Weaver, chairman of the Highway 68 Coalition.

"We are concerned about the increasing number of events," Weaver said. "We range from annoyed and greatly annoyed to frustrated, ready to sell our houses to saying we are going to sue the county."

Weaver added: "We believe the use has gone above and beyond a reasonable use."

In addition to the numerous county-run events, the independent SCRAMP handles five major spectator events a year.

Scott Atherton, SCRAMP General Manager, admitting race cars are "noisy by nature," stressed the 37-year history of the race track. "A vocal minority is attempting to dictate policy that could potentially restrict or eliminate future SCRAMP events," Atherton wrote in a letter aimed at boosting support before the board of supervisors' decision.

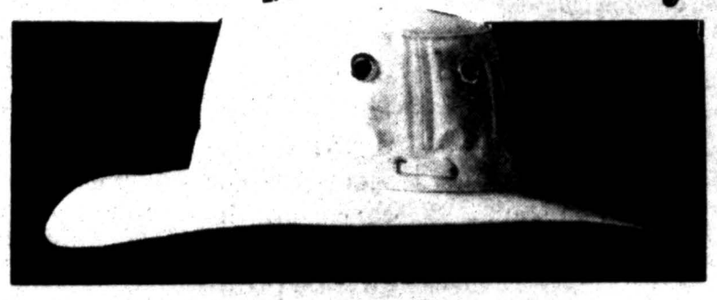

SCRAMP, he emphasized, is a major contributor to local charities, and the race track injects some $100 million into the regional economy.

Noise and crowds at Laguna Seca together make up one of the key issues addressed by the coalition, which is more than 800 strong, according to Weaver.

Benda treated refugees at this hospital in Gahini, a tiny village in war-torn eastern Rwanda.

Rwanda sabbatical leaves Carmel doctor reeling

new for Benda. He has worked in emergency medicine for 15 years. He was a paramedic who, at age 28, went back to medical school at UCLA, graduated and remained there for three more years as an assistant clinical professor.

But more than the bloody wounds, it is the many orphans who grace the pages of Benda's photo album that still leave him groping for words to describe his feelings surrounding the difficulties he faced in dealing with the situation.

"Most of these kids have watched their parents be slaughtered," he recalled. "A lot of them have scars on them from machetes and weapons that were used to try and kill them, too."

And when he wasn't treating wartime injuries, Benda passed out medication for malaria and amoebic dysentery to hundreds of refugees – a chore that was "pretty unrewarding," according to Benda.

Not surprisingly, many natives are used to the suffering, he noted. "They take things in stride much more than we do – both good and bad...death and everything else. They live on a very basic level. Just getting water to their houses is a major daily event."

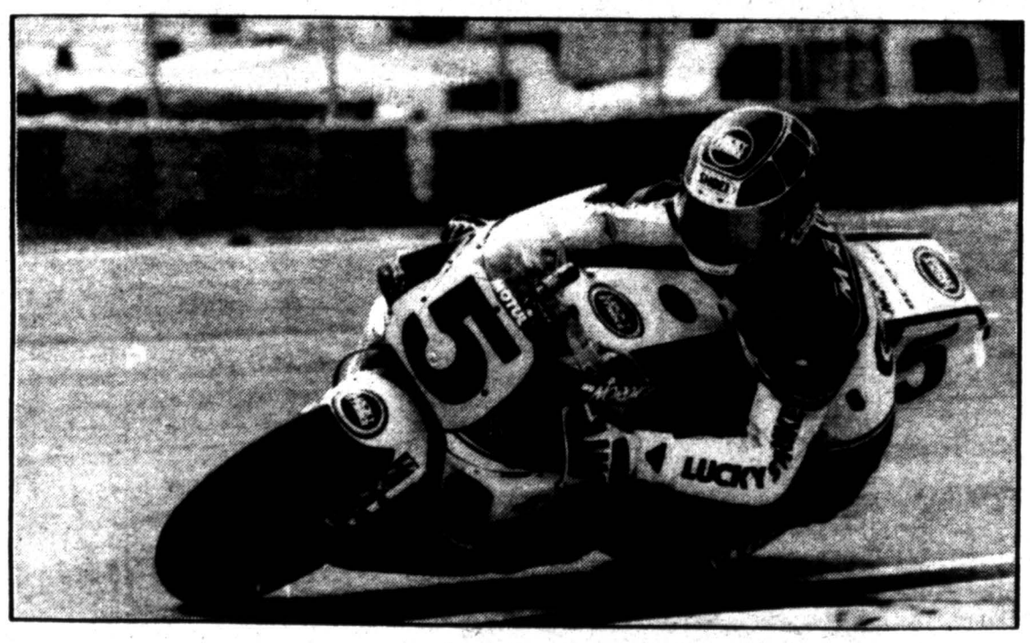

Isolated by the language barrier, Benda said in his spare time he read a book about Buddhism that helped him deal with his frustrations.

One of the fundamental premises of Buddhism is that suffering is attachment. Benda said he began to realize how attached he had become to his expectations about how life in Rwanda should be.

"What I learned is that everything I wanted to happen didn't happen," he surmised. "Nothing was the way I thought it was going to be.

"Piece by piece, I had to let go of what I wanted from the experience and try to accept what it really was."

McCampbell puts fire to Farr on congressional reforms

■ Incumbent counters, contending challenger misrepresents his platform

By PAUL WOLF

CONGRESSIONAL CHALLENGER Bill McCampbell has gone on the offensive against incumbent Sam Farr, contending the 17th District representative opposes key reforms.

The two important areas where Republican McCampbell and Democrat Farr clash are:

• On PAC contributions — which McCampbell has pledged to refuse, and which Farr accepts.

• On term limits — which the challenger supports and the incumbent opposes.

Farr, meanwhile, has answered McCampbell's charges by stating his opponent misrepresents his views. The incumbent also believes McCampbell's positions are shaky under close inspection.

The current campaign is McCampbell's third bid for Congress — his second time against Farr. McCampbell is hoping to portray Farr, a former Monterey County supervisor and longtime assemblyman, as an entrenched career politician committed to a business-as-usual approach to reforms.

McCampbell asserts that most of Farr's campaign funds have come from PAC contributions. Moreover, he said, a disproportionate share of his campaign support originates from outside the district he represents.

"If a person is taking PAC money, the question is whether that person has a conflict of interest," McCampbell said in a telephone interview. "Are they representing the interests of the voters, or are they representing special interests?"

McCampbell would like to see a requirement to keep all campaign funding originating within the district. In addition, he favors a limitation of $25 or $50 from individual contributors — including from the candidates themselves and family members.

With these guidelines, no cap on total spending would be necessary, he said.

"The electoral process should be about finding the right candidate, not about finding out who has the most money," McCampbell said.

Champion of reform?

Farr bristles at the charge he does not favor campaign finance reform, calling himself "a champion of reform." His approach, he maintains, is simply different and less extreme.

Farr is co-author of House legislation, now in conference, that would set a $600,000 cap on spending for a congressional campaign. Out of that amount, no more than $200,000 could come from PACs.

Hoping to debunk McCampbell's position, Farr said, "As I see it, only if you're independently wealthy, you do not need PACs. We can eliminate PACs only once there are other ways of getting money."

Farr said he expects to spend about $200,000 on his re-election bid. Last year, in the primary and general election combined, he spent roughly $600,000.

An unusual issue

The PAC issue has not taken an exclusively partisan tone. For example, in the current California State Assembly battle, it is Democrat Bill Monning who has taken the no-PAC pledge, and Republican incumbent Bruce McPherson who has not.

"Considering that the vast majority of incumbents get re-elected," commented David Yamada, political science instructor at Monterey Peninsula College, "it makes sense that, by and large, the incumbents would waffle on the issue (of accepting PAC money.) The general impression I have is that the public sentiment is behind both (opposing) PACs and term limits.

In California, members of Congress are limited to three terms, although that restriction is "being tied up in the courts," explained Farr.

"There is already a limit, and that limit is two years — a two-year contract," Farr said. "If you want to re-elect a Leon Panetta or someone like that, you should be able to. The government shouldn't be able to tell you whom you cannot re-elect — that is your sacred right."

To McCampbell, the issues of campaign reform and term limits are closely related: They both concern the advantages of incumbents and "career politicians."

McCampbell said: "The necessary campaign finance reforms will not come about until members of Congress know their jobs are only temporary. The founding fathers did not intend to create the profession of the American politician. Interested, capable citizens were to go to Congress, represent the voters...and pass (on) the torch...and continue to work as productive members of the local community."

Here is where they stand

PAC contributions

• Farr co-authored a bill (now in conference) that sets a $200,000 PAC limit per campaign, as well as a $600,000 total cap.

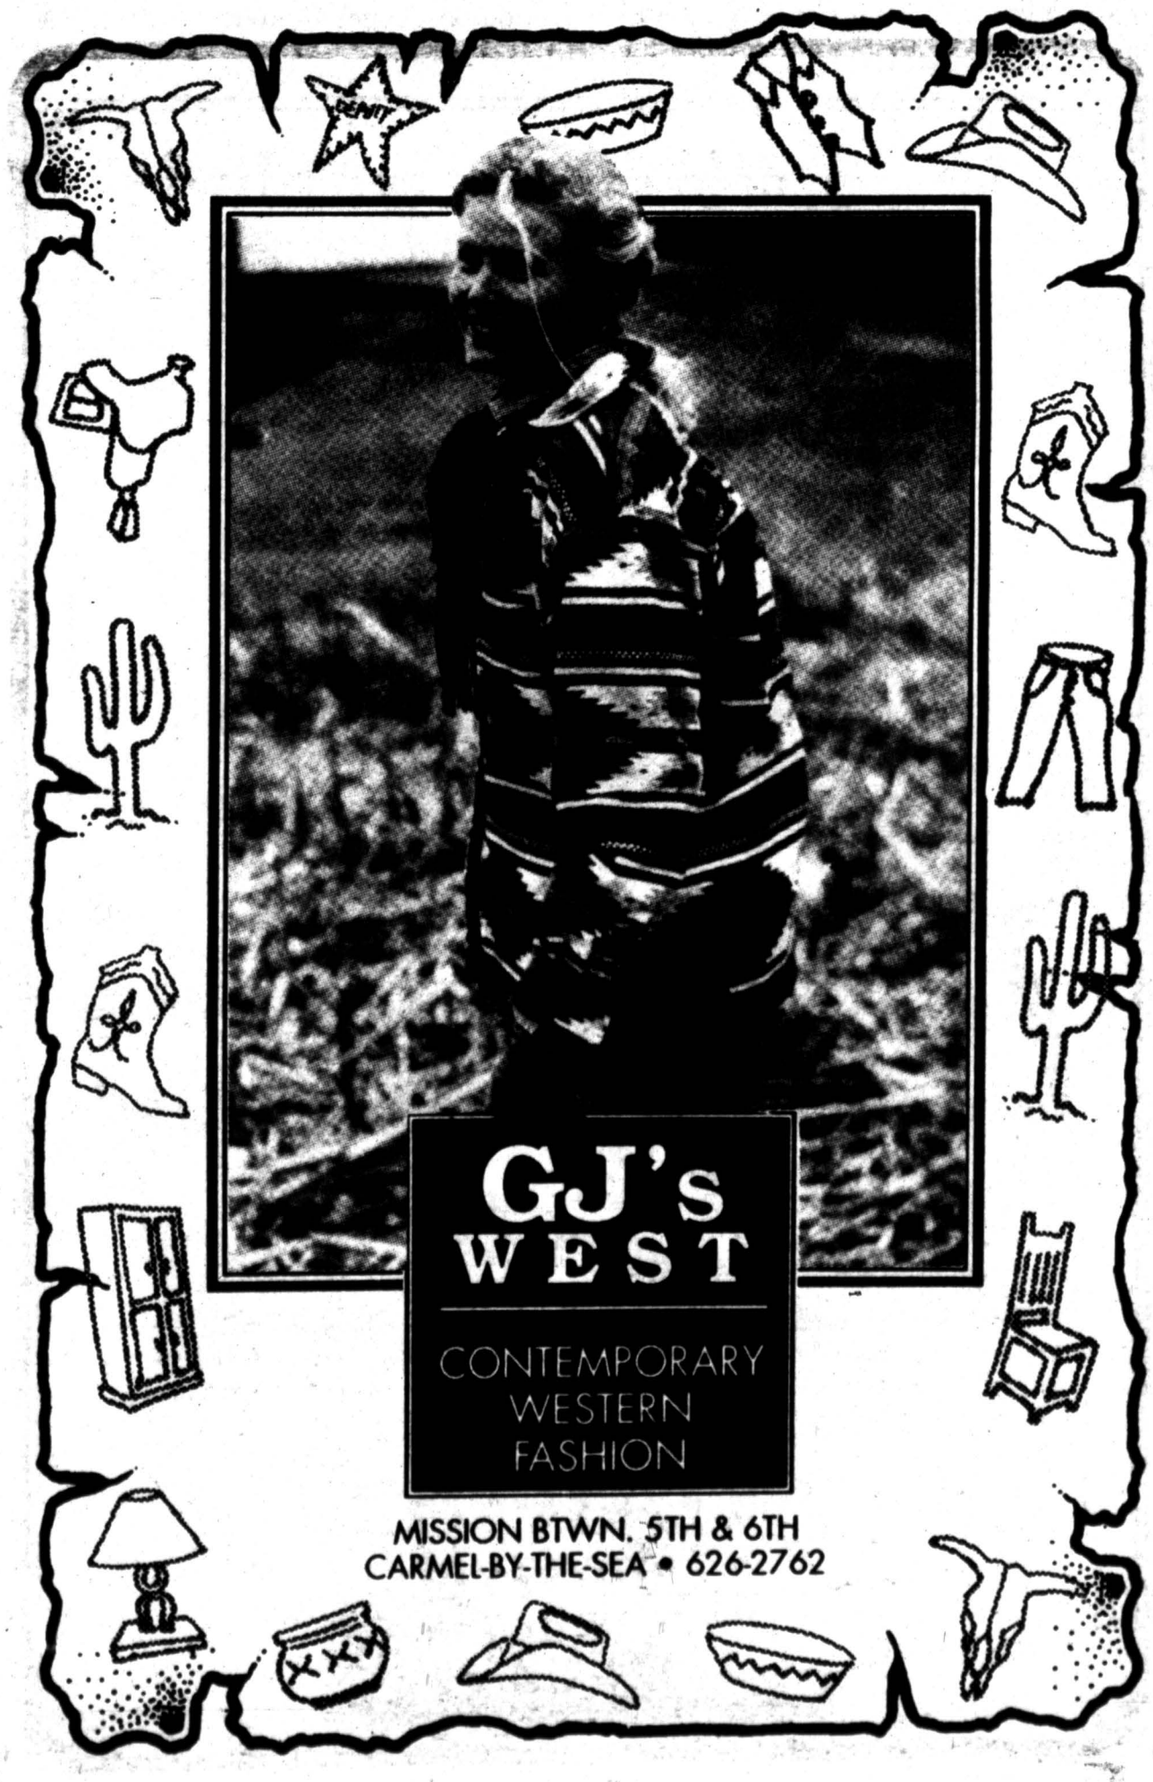

Moreover, he would support a $2,500 limit for each PAC contributor, which would reduce the current federal maximum of $5,000.

• McCampbell opposes PAC funding in campaigns, as well as funds that originate from outside the voter district in question. He supports $25 or $50 limits on individual donations (including the candidates themselves and their spouses).

Term limits

• Farr opposes them.

• McCampbell supports them.

Thodos to push for sprinkler ordinance

such an older housing stock in Carmel, and because a lot of these homes will be upgraded, this is an important issue," Roseth said.

Mandatory sprinkler laws have been proposed before. During the 1980s, the fire department promoted a law that would have required sprinklers with new construction, but the Carmel City Council rejected it, according to Carmel Fire Chief Bill Hill.

According to the chief, other jurisdictions within Monterey County have enacted such laws. "Since we are basically built-out, we don't have that many vacant lots — so (such a law) wouldn't have the same impact as in a new community," Hill said.

Legislating fire prevention would not be anything new. In January 1993, the council approved a law that mandates new roofs or "substantial reroofing" to consist only of Class 1 or Class 2 materials — thus forbidding "untreated" shakes and shingles.

As it stands, the draft housing element does not support or oppose a sprinkler ordinance, but suggests the planning commission and Carmel City Council consider such legislation.

generations of people who will live in Carmel. That is not harmful."

Hydorn was speaking in the context of a hearing on the 1994 Draft Housing Element, which, once finalized, will be a new chapter in the Carmel General Plan.

Hydorn believes a two-week minimum would be better than a month. Also, he believes the city should collect room tax as it does for the dozens of inns in town.

After the hearing, Planning Commission Chairman John Kennedy suggested Hydorn approach the city council to gauge whether it would consider taking up the issue again.

"I didn't get an overwhelming feeling from other commissioners that this was a priority," Kennedy told The Carmel Pine Cone. "Another review could be an exercise in futility."

Hydorn said he was unlikely to pursue the matter by himself — that he wished mainly to communicate his feelings. "This may be my last lecture on the subject."

Over the past year, the city, with the help of City Attorney Don Freeman, has cracked down on agencies that have illegally arranged for the short-term rentals of homes. The ordinance was a landmark of sorts, ascending the way to the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1980s. The high court upheld the law by refusing to hear the case.

Not only would the law need to be overturned, Hydorn admitted, but the General Plan guidelines would need rewriting.

Nevertheless, Hydorn has not been the only one to disagree with the premise behind the ordinance. For one, Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association, has asserted that the two-week minimum is preferable. If the city is serious about raising more revenue, she argued, charging room tax for short-term rentals is a solution.

"Some of our members think the law is ridiculous; others think it is wonderful," she said. "But we can all be objective and say Carmel has lost a market because these people (short-term renters) go someplace else."

Hydorn said he resents a couple of hasty assumptions: that property owners are getting rich on short-term rentals; and that the kinds of people who rent property for one or two weeks are loud, irresponsible neighbors.

"The reality is, the law doesn't make sense," he said. "Most people just cannot take a month off for a vacation the way they used to."

CHS graduates spur organization of directory

CARMEL HIGH School alumni need help assembling a nationwide directory of graduates.

CHS has contracted with the Graduate Connection – a division of Bernard C. Harris Publishing Co. – to provide a data base of alumni information at no charge. According to Mary Holtzinger, associate project coordinator, the company makes a profit by selling bound directories to alumni. Names and addresses are held in strictest confidence, she noted.

"We don't sell names," Holtzinger said. "We don't use that information for any other purpose other than publishing the directory."

Kimberly Spindler Wright, a Carmel Unified School District secretary and graduate of the CHS Class of '72, is serving as a liaison between the Graduate Connection and the school, according to Holtzinger. Spindler Wright and Sandy Wise, a Carmel parent and graduate of the CHS Class of '64, have been working on locating graduates and establishing a CHS alumni group since the end of the 1993-94 school year.

According to Spindler Wright, the graduate directory will make it easier to plan social gatherings of alumni, particularly class reunions. Furthermore, she said the high school will get to keep a computer program which alumni can update on their own.

"What we needed was just to get this started and to find everybody," Spindler Wright said. "It's a full-time job."

Persons with information about CHS alumni or who would like additional information about the project are asked to call Holtzinger at 1-800-654-4522, or Spindler Wright at the district office, 624-1546.

Or write: Carmel High School Directory of Graduates, The Graduate Connection, 22 Koger Center, Norfolk, VA 23502-4169.

...to improve your game and make it more enjoyable!

Choke down consistently with your chipping clubs

Grip down on your chipping clubs for control–halfway to the steel at least. But grip down to the exact same point on every club, to standardize the feel from one club to the next. I hear weekend golfers say that different clubs have different feels. That's because they grip one club short and another one long. So grip down to the identical spot on every club.

Prop. 172 boon to include new police car, other items

■ Based on limitations, Carmel police chief pleased with city's take.

By PAUL WOLF

NO ONE expected Carmel to gain a massive infusion of money or resources from Proposition 172, but every bit helps.

In a grant to the City of Carmel, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors last week approved about $36,000 in police equipment from Prop. 172 revenues that they have divided among the cities.

"Given the limitations on how requests from small cities were received, I am pleased with what we will get," said Carmel Police Chief Don Fuselier.

The board has given preliminary approval to its 1994-95 budget, which includes the Prop. 172 allocations.

Carmel put in a request for one new police car, video equipment, rain gear, bullet-proof vests and "a number of little things," according to the police chief.

In November, California voters authorized a half-cent sales tax increase to raise revenues for law-enforcement and public-safety programs.

The legislation stipulates that counties throughout the state are recipients of nearly all of the funds. For example, while Carmel this year will receive a mere $5,111, the County of Monterey received a $14 million windfall.

The county kept 90 percent of the $14 million in revenues, agreeing to dole out the remaining 10 percent ($1.4 million) to cities. To help in the process, it formed a public safety advisory committee to receive requests from the cities.

Varied in size

The requests varied in size. For example, the City of Salinas is set to receive 29 new police cars, freeing up money to hire seven new police officers.

"When Carmel made its request, we understood there were limited dollars available, so we didn't want to be greedy," Fuselier said. "We recognized the needs in places like Salinas and Seaside were greater."

Already this year, the Carmel Police Department, which has endured staff cuts over the past two years, has received a boost from the city council's decision to add a full-time police officer to the force. Two half-time spots were turned into two full-time positions.

Also, in recent months, the department has received two new police cars. The county grant "makes for the third brand-new car," Fuselier said.

Although Prop. 172 sets up a permanent new funding source for law-enforcement and fire services, the county, facing worsening budget hardships, is unlikely to continue its public-safety grant program to cities in coming years, according to both Fuselier and City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

Raw deal?

Kersnar argues voters duped on Prop. 172 funds

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL CITY Administrator Jere Kersnar assailed the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for using its Proposition 172 revenues to restore staffing in the unincorporated areas rather than fight crime in the cities.

Kersnar said the urban areas — particularly Salinas and Seaside — were the intended beneficiaries of the half-cent sales tax hike, approved by voters statewide in November.

"If you ask any law-enforcement professionals or even non-professionals where the problems are, they will tell you it's on the streets of Salinas and Seaside," the city administrator said.

"The supervisors have made a terrible mistake, and what they have done goes contrary to what the voters intended."

All Prop. 172 money is legally bound to benefit public safety programs — which embracing police and fire services.

It is common knowledge the true concern was not for fire protection but fighting the war on crime, Kersnar argued. Not 10 percent, but 100 percent, of the proposition funds should have been directed to the real problem: Law-enforcement in the urban areas, Kersnar argued.

Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas defended the county's split of money, stating, "The unincorporated areas have crime, too."

Karas noted that the state, not the county, devised the formula. And the county, in part, has had to make up for the millions of dollars the state has taken from county property tax revenues.

"I think it all breaks down fairly," Karas said.

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula begins its fall program with a meeting at 12:30 p.m. today at the Unitarian Church, 490 Aguajito Road near the Pebble Beach and Pacific Grove exit on Highway 1.

A $5 donation is requested for the lunch, which will be served at noon. There is no charge.

City Talk

City blight? It's up to all residents to help rectify problem

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

THROUGH THE good graces of The Carmel Pine Cone, those of us in city government plan to use this space on an occasional basis to communicate with you about a number of subjects of interest to all of us in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

At our Aug. 16 town hall meeting at Vista Lobos, a number of residents expressed concern about one topic in particular. Thus, I have chosen it for the subject of this first column.

Most of you have probably noticed we seem to be falling into the habit of leaving our recycling and/or garbage bins in front of our homes for a number of days after the pickup date. While it may seem to some that one or two of these may not look so bad, we need to really look around. These receptacles have become a real blight on the landscape!

A number of people commented at the meeting that they would like to see the city do something about that problem. As a first step, I'm reminding every resident that the city has long ago done something about it — specifically via provisions of the Municipal Code which require that "all (garbage/recycle) receptacles within the R-1 district shall be contained on private property and shall be screened from public view." (Municipal Code Section 8.16.030.)

Spirit of the law

While we surely don't want or need "garbage police" scanning neighborhoods and citing violators, we ask each resident to abide by the spirit of the law and move the containers back out of sight so we can maintain a nice, uniformly clean and uncluttered look about our residential neighborhoods and business district.

We realize a large number of homes are long-term rentals and, as such, are managed by real estate companies. I plead with these property managers to establish a regular system so that all trash and recycle containers are promptly replaced to their proper storage area as soon after garbage/recycle pickup as possible.

This is a legitimate concern that affects all of us and one that can be easily addressed with minimum effort.

And, on the subject of a clean and pleasant looking community, I ask your help in becoming the city's "eyes and ears" for areas of our community that are in disrepair or need attention in terms of cleaning up, weeding, trimming, pruning, etc.

While our able city staff is absolutely first-rate, it becomes apparent, with the recent authorized reduction in staffing, that they can't be at all places all of the time. Hence, residents could be of great help to us in pointing out areas in the city that need attention.

Comments, questions? Direct them to Mayor Ken White at City Hall, 624-2781, or drop him a note at Box CC, Carmel 93921.

Carmel was besieged by tourists from out of town over Labor Day weekend, including one-year-old Nate Mills, who drove in from Petaluma. He was seen 'pumping up' Friday afternoon at Lugo's Shell-by-the-Sea.

Sanctuary advisory council urges action on Vessel Traffic Safety Study

THE MONTEREY Bay National Marine Sanctuary (MBNMS) Advisory Council is urging federal officials to give high priority to oil spill prevention.

At its Aug. 24 meeting, the advisory council passed a resolution regarding the Vessel Traffic Safety Study currently being conducted by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and the U.S. Coast Guard.

The study – which was mandated by Congress in legislation that created the sanctuary in 1992 – calls for a comprehensive review of all vessel traffic patterns within the sanctuary, which encompasses offshore waters from San Francisco to Cambria.

The council resolution urges NOAA and the Coast Guard to:

- Require tankers and other "deep-draft" vessels with the potential to cause a substantial oil spill to travel further offshore, and outside the three northern and central California national marine sanctuaries, except when entering ports.
- Secure swift and effective response to a disabled vessel offshore through contracting for or stationing an emergency rescue towing vessel in port approaches, or coastwide if minimum offshore distances are not adopted.
- Improve the vessel traffic lanes entering San Francisco Bay to minimize travel in sanctuary waters and to keep ships away from coastal headlands and offshore islands.
- Establish shipping traffic monitoring capability along the entire California coast.

"The danger to marine life from an oil spill is very real," said Karin Strasser Kauffman, council chairwoman.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By DORIS DAY

Did you know?

THE TERM "dog days" of summer refers to the weeks from July 3 to August 11 and it has come to mean the hottest part of the season. This time period also coincides with the rising and setting of Sirius, the dog star, which is visible at that time of the year in the early morning before sunrise.

What's new

Now "animal people" in New Jersey have a way to show the world they're animal friendly while supporting their state's low-cost spay and neuter program.

In 1992, animal welfare activists, veterinarians, shelter workers and breeders formed a coalition to help raise funds for New Jersey's spay and neuter program. They came up with a special New Jersey license plate to be sold to cat and dog lovers with the proceeds going directly to the spay and neuter fund. The proposal passed the state legislature and the plates became available early this year.

Each license plate displays the letters IM, followed by a number, name or other combination, and the words Animal Friendly.

These plates are beautiful and they benefit our Best Friends. So how about it, California?

Pet first aid kit

When your pet is injured or becomes ill, what you do before getting to the veterinarian may prevent unnecessary pain and suffering. The PetProtect First Aid kit was designed with this idea in mind.

This little kit has so many terrific items. There's a pet emergency guide with invaluable information about first aid instruction and techniques. The pet care guide discusses accident prevention, safety tips and general health maintenance. There's a window decal to alert emergency personnel to the pets in your home. And there are helpful first aid items like tweezers, bandages, gloves, tape and dressings included in a great little waterproof case. Even the handles can be removed to be used as splints!

The PetProtect First Aid Kit was produced in cooperation with the Woodgreen College of Animal Welfare, one of the largest humane societies in Great Britain. It is available through my pet foundation for just $19.95. To order, send your check or money order to the DDPF, PO Box 8166, Universal City, CA 91608. Or phone us at 647-2350 if you'd like more information.

Crime Tip

FROM THE CARMEL POLICE DEPARTMENT

We 'D.A.R.E.' you

LET'S NOT kid ourselves. Whether we like it or not, drugs are almost everywhere. They're in our schools, our parks, and even on our beaches.

If our children want to get high, they can usually find someone who'll supply the means. Marijuana, cocaine, LSD, and yes, even "crack" and heroin are available if you have the money and know where to look. Although we wish it were otherwise, some of these drugs can be obtained right here in Carmel.

If things are tight in town, almost anything one might want is readily available just a few miles away. Availability is not the only problem. Add the enormous power of peer pressure to the equation and it's easy to understand why so many of our children find it hard to say no to drugs.

While we are constantly working to stem the flow of drugs into the community, we recognize that law enforcement alone is not enough. Education has proven an effective tool in the battle against illegal drug use and the earlier this begins, the better.

This is the reason we established the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) Program in Carmel-by-the-Sea in 1988. Over the past six years, we have brought an important message to children who attend Junipero Serra School: Drugs do not have to be part of your life. You can be "cool," "with it" and popular without having to do drugs and alcohol. Oh sure, not everyone listens, but more than a few have taken the message to heart. If even one child is deterred from choosing the dark road, it's worth the effort.

Corporal Stephen Rana, who originally developed the local program, continues to present the curriculum to students in the fifth and sixth grades. Experience has shown that the program is most effective during these years. Not only are drugs and the consequences of abuse covered, the program also places great emphasis on the child's individual sense of self-esteem. Students learn how to deal with various forms of peer-pressure, and what is more important, how to say "no" while respecting the rights of others.

In addition to his weekly sessions, Cpl. Rana regularly visits the classrooms of younger students (kindergarten through fourth grade), slowly preparing them for his program when they reach the fifth grade. This introduces them to the police in a relaxed atmosphere, and enables them to feel comfortable asking for help if they should need it.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department's D.A.R.E. Program is funded by the members ofthe Carmel Police Officers' Association and supplemented by donations from various civic groups. Cpl. Rana has touched the lives of more than 600 children since the program began. We believe the message has helped. You can be sure that we will continue to try.

CRIME TIP is written by Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras of the Carmel Police Department, and the space is provided free as a community service message by The Carmel Pine Cone.

Shops in the Spotlight

Goph & Co.

MASTER CRAFTSMAN Goph Albitz has designed and made exquisite jewelry in Carmel for more than 20 years.

Albitz's award winning designs — he's best known for his inlay and diamond stacking rings — have been shown in fine galleries and shops throughout the country.

With Albitz's industrial aerospace design experience and unique use of more than 35 different stones, his inlay pieces are extraordinary. The newest collection is now on display at Goph and Co. in the Mission Patio between Fifth and Sixth.

The shop offers a wide range of jewelry, from pearls to bezel-set stones to hand-made one-of-a-kind pieces, including elegant pieces made with Australian opals.

Custom designing also is an economically cleaver way to create a new and special piece from stones set in jewelry that is no longer worn.

Goph and Co. is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday through Saturday. Further information, or an appointment, is available by calling 625-1001.

Some of the most delightful creations are her clay dolls. Each exquisitely hand-painted doll is outfitted with beautiful clothes and accessories covering a soft body filled with rice.

With prices from $5 to $500, there is something special for everyone at Kathleen Kelly's on Mission between Fifth and Sixth. The shop is open Wednesday through Monday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Further information is available by calling 625-9763.

Water sampling, stenciling, outfall mapping among Surfrider Foundation's projects

In Carmel, although some storm drains have been stenciled, Henson said the effort has been met by lukewarm response from city officials. "I'm a little vague at this point about whether they want us to come back and do more," he said.

"It's sort of like, 'Thank you very much. We'll call you.' They haven't called back yet."

But Henson noted the City of Carmel has generally been supportive of surfing, particularly the annual Surfabout held at Carmel Beach.

Locally, these worthwhile activities have helped improve the image of surfing and surfers, according to Henson, who noted a peninsula-wide sewage outfall mapping project also is underway.

"The whole idea of the Surfrider Foundation is to get surfers to use the environmental concern that is innate in them, and direct it toward something positive, something with tangible results," Henson related.

And Surfrider may be a healthy alternative for youngsters who want to be a member of a group, or "gang."

"By definition, surfers are already part of their own gang, their own subculture," Henson said. "I think it's fortunate that Surfrider is cool, and that it's doing good things environmentally."

But Henson said Surfrider's existence is only made possible because a sufficient number of surfers in his generation realized it was possible to have a positive impact on the environment. He said the organization depends on environmental laws, such as those that protect the new Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary.

While other environmental groups help police the sanctuary, surfers are actually in the ocean and, for better or for worse, typically serve as the control group in the "experiment," according to Henson.

"We truly are the canary in the coal mine, the guinea pigs," he said.

To learn more about the Blue Water Task Force or to join the Monterey County Chapter of the Surfrider Foundation, call Henson at 659-5334, or write: P.O. Box 1410, Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

Where There's a Will...

By THOMAS HART HAWLEY

A glance inside your estate planning toolbox

THIS WEEK, we're going to take a break from taxes. (Buck up! We'll return to them next week.)

Instead, we'll explore the various documents you may want to use with your estate plan. Think of these documents as tools in your estate planning toolbox. At least one of these tools may be just the right thing to fix a future problem.

■ Durable power of attorney for health care: This document allows you to appoint the person of your choice to make health care decisions for you if you are unable to do so. You also may designate that your life not be artificially prolonged if your condition is irreversible. Or, alternatively, you may designate that every measure be undertaken to keep you alive.

You also may consent to the donation of your body parts for medical or scientific purposes. The advantage of this document is that it invests the person of your choice with the power to monitor and control the course of your medical treatment.

If there is someone to whom you are willing to delegate this authority, do it!

■ Directive to physicians: This document (also referred to as a Living Will) is useful if there is nobody to whom you want to delegate your health care decisions. It directs your physician to withhold life sustaining treatment if you are in an irreversible coma.

■ Durable general power of attorney: This document appoints another person to conduct your affairs for you. You can choose to have it take effect immediately or only in the event of your future incompetency. In cases of temporary disability, it is an economical alternative to a conservatorship. Also, if you have a living trust, it can be used to transfer assets you might have overlooked into the trust if you are incompetent to do so.

■ Community property affidavit: This document converts assets held in joint tenancy to community property. In an earlier article, we discussed the advantages of holding property that has gone up in value as community property. Before 1984 you could sometimes convince Uncle Sam that property held in joint tenancy had been changed to community property by the oral agreement of the spouses.

Now, however, Uncle Sam insists that any change from joint tenancy to community property be in writing. This simple affidavit can save you substantial income taxes!

■ Nomination of conservator: A conservatorship is a judicial proceeding in which the court appoints an individual or institution to take over the handling of your affairs if you are unable to do so yourself. Did you know you can nominate your own conservator even if you may never need a conservatorship? You also can nominate a conservator in your Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care.

In most conservatorships, the conservator must post a bond. The bond protects the conservatorship from loss if the conservator takes a powder to Mexico with the assets of the conservatorship. Bonds can be expensive. Therefore, when your nominee is a trusted relative or close family friend, you may wish to waive the bond requirement in your nomination.

Next week: We'll see how, through charitable giving, you can have your cake and eat it too.

Obituaries

Jacobson, Udith O., 84, of Pebble Beach, died Aug. 27. Born in Colusa, the former bookkeeper moved to the Monterey Peninsula where she enjoyed playing golf and bridge and volunteered at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. Traditional employer-funded pension plans are on the decline, which explains in part why 401(k) retirement programs are multiplying. The programs get their name from Section 401(k) of the U.S. Tax Code, which went into effect at the beginning of the 1980s. Under this program, employees decide how much of their pay — up to an IRS-set limit — to allocate regularly to the retirement savings program. Some companies make a matching contribution. Individuals have their own accounts. One benefits consultant predicts that 401(k) programs will be the nation's "largest source of personal wealth" by the turn of the century.

Probation pulling Padres closer together

CHS quarterback John Geisler says the team's attitude is upbeat despite the program being placed on probation.

■ Some stunned, others angry, but players coping with sanctions.

By GARTH MERRILL

CARMEL HIGH School football players were stunned last week to learn the Padre varsity team would be barred from post-season play this season because of an infraction by their coach of a statewide no-recruiting rule.

"There's nothing we really can do," said senior wide receiver Dustin Nagai, a three-year varsity starter and a team leader. "It makes our season short, so we've got to put even more into it."

The Padres incurred the penalty, which prohibits the team from participating in the Central Coast Section playoffs or vying for the Mission Trail Athletic League title, as a result of a spring visit to Carmel Middle School by six-year head coach Craig Johnston, who was there to pass out flyers for a summer weight-lifting program.

Although the penalty hit the team hard, Padre players reserved their anger for the system that created it rather than the coach who brought it on.

"I was behind Coach J. all the way," said Padre

Padres open Saturday vs. Harbor

FOLLOWING LAST weekend's scrimmage against Seaside, the Carmel High School football team is excited — and perhaps a bit relieved considering the probation issue — to get the 1994 season off the ground against non-league opponent, Harbor High.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday at Carmel's Bardarson Field.

Harbor finished last year in the cellar of the Santa Cruz Coast Athletic League with a 1-5 mark (3-7 overall), but played Carmel tough in the '93 opener before falling 32-28.

This season, however, could be different.

"I think it's going to be a lower score, and not that shootout like last year," says Craig Johnston, CHS head coach.

According to Johnston, Harbor played extremely tough in a jamboree it participated in last weekend.

"Harbor looked like a completely different team," Johnston said. "They dominated (the jamboree), and I was really impressed... it's going to be a heck of a game."

This metamorphosis could be partly due to the acquisition of a new coach, Tim Tramp, who was signed last spring to replace Dave Bunton. Also, Johnston says, "They (Harbor) have a bunch of seniors who have been with the team since their sophomore seasons, and two really good running backs (Jason Trotter and Andy Brenkwitz)."

At 5-11, 200 pounds, Trotter will be tough for the Padres to stop. Harbor quarterback Brian Schabel rounds out the talented backfield.

Scrimmage goes well

In last Saturday's scrimmage, Carmel went up against an evenly matched Seaside team.

"I think it went as well as could be expected," Johnston noted. "Our guys played hard, but thank goodness it didn't count."

The offense looked strong, but will be without the services of running back Brent Carlson, who re-injured his knee.

"I was sorry to see Brent get hurt, but Matt Cramer and Nachi Cardenas stepped in and did a nice job," the coach said.

Johnston did say that the Padres have room for improvement, however, when they don't have the ball.

"We really need to work on defense... our defense has to play better."

■ Water Polo

The Padres are so imposing this year, it has some Mission Trail Athletic League opponents shaking out of their Speedos. CHS Coach Ed Sigourney elaborates: "I'm really looking forward to this year; it's probably the best team I've ever coached."

The aquajocks have a talented array of seniors, including a quintet appropriately nicknamed the "Fab-Five." This includes Kyle Nichols, Stephen Bonanfant, John Rigney, Mike Allaire and Aaron Gaily, three of whom were selected to the Northern California All-Star team this summer.

However, Carmel will have to get by perennial league champ, Live Oak, if it wants to obtain a league title.

"I expect to at least get second in league," says senior Brad Lewis.

Last year, the Padres posted a 7-6 league record and an 18-18 overall showing, including an appearance at the Central Coast Section playoffs. That was with a primarily all-junior squad.

"We didn't really have any senior leadership with only two seniors last year," Sigourney said.

The varsity squad plays in its first tournament over the weekend in Novato.

■ Girls Tennis

Coached by Dave Chaney, the Padres will once again find itself in the annual dogfight in pursuit of the Mission Trail Athletic League crown.

It will definitely be a challenge though, considering the Padres lost their No. 1 player, junior Chrissy Handel. Besides Handel, Carmel only lost one of its doubles teams due to graduation.

Last year, CHS finished behind Robert Louis Stevenson and Santa Catalina, and just missed a playoff berth.

The team's first match is set for Friday against Harbor at the Carmel tennis courts.

■ Girls Volleyball

The spikers have already begun their pre-season, and will play their last non-league game against San Lorenzo Valley on Tuesday at Carmel.

International flavor enlivens motorcycle fever at Laguna Seca

By GARTH MERRILL

YANKS WILL ride for American pride and team honor as they try to stop a determined challenger from Down Under from finishing atop the world championship points standings when the United States Motorcycle Grand Prix burns rubber this weekend at Laguna Seca Raceway.

An international field, including riders from Spain, Brazil, Italy and Great Britain will compete for 30 laps on Laguna Seca's 2.196-mile raceway in round 12 of the 14-race grand prix series. The hottest competition of the series, at speeds of up to 200 mph, is in the 500cc class.

The Americans have yet to lose a USMGP 500cc event on native soil. The rest of the world has yet to win one, including Australian Mick Doohan, the newly crowned 1994 500cc World Champion.

"I've been hearing a lot about how the Yanks have never lost the 500cc at Laguna," Doohan said. "This year could be a different story."

Doohan actually led the race at Laguna Seca last year, but he hit the wall in a crash and was forced to drop out. American John Kocinski of Suzuki went on to take the honors.

"I'm really looking forward to Laguna Seca, where the straights are short and the riding counts for so much more," said the 26-year-old Kocinski, who won the opening GP round in Australia.

"The thing about Laguna is you either like it or you don't."

Kocinski's Suzuki teammates include Doug Chandler of Monterey and Kevin Schwantz of Paige, Texas, the 1993 500cc World Champion.

Practice and qualifying sessions will dominate the slate on Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On Sunday, warm-up sessions continue throughout the morning in preparation for an afternoon of championship racing. At noon, the 31-lap 250 cc U.S. Grand Prix will begin; at 1:15 p.m., the 33-lap 500cc championships are scheduled; and at 2:30 p.m., the 29-lap 125 cc grand prix caps the weekend of motorcycle racing. CCS '93 runner-up Santa Cruz is RLS' first foe

Saturday's contest will shed light on Pirate prospects for '94

By DOUG THOMPSON

IF THE Robert Louis Stevenson varsity football team has been wondering whether it can match the success of last year's squad, imagine what Santa Cruz High must be thinking.

The Cardinals, who visit Alumni Field for a 2 p.m. non-league contest Saturday against RLS, are coming off a season certain to be long remembered at that school. Santa Cruz not only romped through the 10-game regular season undefeated — including 26-7 and 57-0 wins over RLS and Carmel High, respectively — but it advanced to the Central Coast Section Division III championship round, where it finally fell to St. Francis.

And while last season's loss to Santa Cruz was disappointing to RLS head coach Jeff Young at the time, he grew to gain comfort from the 19-point setback.

"In comparison to other teams, we didn't do badly," noted Young, whose team was a first-round casualty in the CCS playoffs.

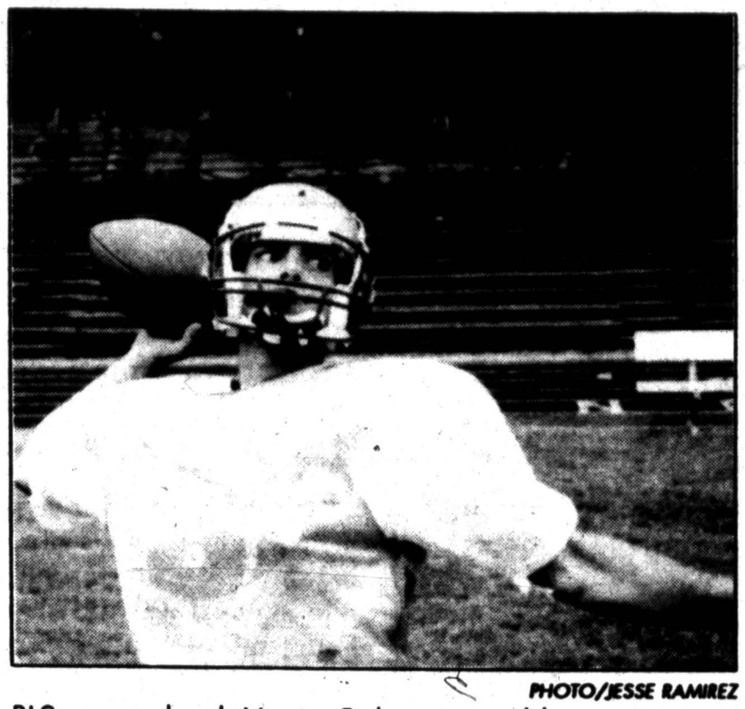

But Young realizes that was last year and the 1994 season opener is what's foremost on his mind.

"They have a good nucleus back and a lot of young kids coming off a good junior varsity team, so they'll be a tough tuneup," Young said of Santa Cruz, which lost several key players to graduation, including quarterback Jermaine Robinson and running back Reggie Stephens.

Glum prediction?

Apparently the San Jose Mercury News is looking for a sharp dropoff for the Cardinals as, in its Wednesday edition, the newspaper predicted a sixth-place finish for them in the seven-team Santa Cruz Coast Athletic League. (In fact, the Mercury News also looks for RLS to fall to sixth place in the seven-team Mission Trail Athletic League.)

It wasn't just last season, however, when Santa Cruz, guided by longtime coach Ron Mehuron, waxed RLS. The Cardinals have won the last six meetings between the two schools, whose season-opening traditional matchup spans more than a decade.

RLS quarterback Vinnie Balestreri and his teammates are focused on Saturday's 2 p.m. non-league matchup against defending CCS Division III finalist Santa Cruz.

Because RLS also graduated its fair share of top players from last season's team, Young isn't all too sure what to expect Saturday from his own troops. Even last Friday's jamboree at Pacific Grove didn't help clear up the picture.

"We'll get a much better feel from Saturday's game —it's so hard to figure much from a jamboree," Young said. "But I felt fairly positive. There were some glaring mistakes, but overall I was happy with the performance."

In the three-team jamboree, involving PG and Palma, Young said the Pirates played well for a unit that is still getting used to each other.

"We're young, but we're experienced," Young observed. "We're actually fairly polished for a young team. All those juniors (now seniors) who had a chance to play on last season's CCS team have a feeling of confidence. They want to again step up to that level."

Although Vinnie Balestreri viewed much of last season from the sidelines, the senior will make his starting debut at quarterback Saturday for the Pirates. To make life easier for Balestreri, he will have Mike Prowell in the backfield.

"I really expect Mike to have a great year," Young said of the 5-10, 180-pound senior halfback from San Anselmo.

Preceding the contest is the 11:45 a.m. RLS-Santa Cruz junior varsity game.

Rules are on the books to safeguard best interests of kids

dents as potential high school athletes? Craig Johnston, the CHS varsity football coach, and I made an unwise decision to conduct any kind of meeting regarding the football program at CHS on the Carmel Middle School campus. After reading the articles published in the aftermath of the probation in The (Salinas) Californian, The Monterey County Herald and The Carmel Pine Cone, I believe an important point has possibly been overlooked.

Coach Johnston and I knew that meetings of this kind are prohibited by the MTAL. And it is true that flyers regarding the weight training program and a 15-minute meeting inviting students to participate in football took place last spring on the CMS campus.

As a result of the recent penalty handed down by the MTAL, I have received quite a bit of input from parents questioning the value of such a rule. How could it be wrong for CMS to contribute to the athletic program at CHS?

Real issue — set an example

The real issue here is not about the appropriateness of California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) rules and regulations. It is not about equitable enforcement of those rules throughout the league. It is about setting examples for kids. How can we expect students to follow rules and regulations if the adults involved in the programs do not?

As school officials, we are bound to comply with all rules and regulations as they are written. High school officials are bound to follow reporting procedures as established by the league. Otherwise, there would be no point in having them. Rules are written to safeguard the best interests of kids.

There are other fall sports at CHS that are entitled to an equal access to the students. Let's not focus on details such as possible violations by other schools or who reported what. None of this would be at issue if Coach Johnston and I had followed the rules to begin with.

I was surprised — ignorant, perhaps — by the consequence of our actions. That is no excuse.

It occurred to me while reading last week's front page article in The Pine Cone that we were missing the point. My opinion about the value of a rule as it applies to CMS is just that — my opinion. Let's leave the opinions to those who fully understand the rules and work hard to implement them as directed by the league.

Carmel High School is fortunate to have officials who are willing to play by the book. Let's hope this incident will inspire all coaches and schools throughout the league to play by the same book.

Coach Johnston and I will take responsibility for our indiscretions. Isn't that what we are trying to teach our students? My apologies to the teams and school for having to deal with a situation that could and should have been avoided.

Best wishes to all involved in the football program. Let's learn from these mistakes and make the best of it. Go Padres!

senior quarterback John Geisler. "I never resented him."

Geisler said many of his teammates didn't know where to place their anger and felt derailed by the penalty.

"They were all kind of confused," he said. "They didn't really know what was going on."

"Most of the seniors were angry at first," Nagai said. He included himself in that group. "I was angry. I was hurting."

Nagai said he was angered most by the severity of the penalty.

"I understand the rule. But he (Johnston) did go down to our own middle school, and all he did was pass around flyers... I was shocked there was that big of a consequence."

Other Padres agreed.

"I was stunned," said strong safety Matt Cramer. "I didn't know what to think."

"I could see if he went to a different school, say in Monterey, and said to come to Carmel," said senior linebacker Brandon Glanville. "But this is our own middle school."

"I don't think the rule should be dismissed from the rule books," said senior linebacker Darren Demayo. "But it should allow us to go to our own district schools."

The Padres have responded to the adversity by pulling closer together. Geisler credits the upbeat attitude to the seniors on the squad.

"We all kept our heads up and weren't discouraged, and I think the rest saw that," he said.

For the first time in years the CCS playoffs appeared a possibility for the Padres. Now they're playing for pride.

"The only thing left to prove is our dignity," said senior defensive lineman Justin Garza, "and to show how we can compete with everybody else even if we can't go to CCS."

The Padres kick off the 1994 season at 2 p.m. Saturday at Bardarson Field with a non-league game against Harbor High. (See Padre Sports Scene, page 24, for preview.)

Let's take one careful step at a time in selling off city assets

DURING LAST summer's budget process, Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar put the city council through some useful paces to help members shape a final budget package.

Using a process-of-elimination exercise, he had members distinguish between each person's budget preferences (read pet projects) and commonly held priorities.

Now, with the council scheduled Sept. 13 to consider what to do with city assets — parks, buildings and facilities — it would be worthwhile to undergo a similar process. Despite the notoriously divergent opinions on the council, there is likely to be some agreement about which pieces of real estate the city should consider for sale.

We believe the council should first find the common ground, then tread carefully.

The two key questions for each of the dozen or so properties in question will be: Do the benefits — or anticipated benefits — justify the cost of retaining the land or facility? Is the property being put to its best use?

When all the voices on the council are heard together, they are not likely to cry out for any irresponsible plans. After all, most of the city's assets serve some function — whether municipal services, open space or historic preservation.

As Councilwoman Barbara Livingston has said, "Once a property is sold, it's gone forever."

Wide array

Rio Park, First Murphy House, Flanders Mansion, Carmel City Hall, the police and fire stations, Picadilly Park, Mission Trails Park, the libraries — these properties have little in common save for the city's ownership.

An overall vision is imperative. To sell the church building that houses city hall would be foolish without a comprehensive plan coordinating all city services.

Where environmental protection has been the goal, simple ownership of Rio Park (to prevent private development) may be far more important than whether the proposed recreational facilities are installed. But the council must determine if that is so.

For those properties that serve daily village life, such as the First Murphy House and Flanders Mansion, we ask: Must the city own or operate the buildings to control their uses?

At this stage of the game, it is the no-loss propositions that seem most appealing. For instance, Mayor White's proposal to sell off the rarely used back two-thirds of Picadilly Park and preserve the front portion as a quiet downtown resting spot is unlikely to generate a lot of controversy.

In addition, selling wetlands areas on Rio Park to the State Department Fish & Game also presents no particular risk. If we can have our cake and eat it too, no scheme is too modest to be pursued at this stage of the game.

The current debt load — 8.25 percent of the general fund — may be on the high side. But before liquidation fever overwhelms us, let's take some carefully considered baby steps — rather than rush down a path from which we cannot easily return.

Tree Trimmers Anonymous

Dear Editor:

While the cities of Seaside and Salinas endure almost daily drive-by shootings by gang members, the citizens of Carmel are subjected to egocentric drive-by videos.

What I'm referring to is the page one article in last week's Pine Cone regarding the travails of Joseph Chaffers, who had to pay $500 and has to perform 20 hours of community service for trimming the oak trees in and about his property.

In addition, Mr. Chaffers had to pay his attorney $580 to negotiate a reduced sentence from life without parole to the above community service and $500.

I have never met Mr. Chaffers, but have admired his yard for years. I have driven past his residence on my way to the beach and have always noticed how meticulously he has maintained his landscape.

What Mr. Chaffers has been subjected to defies common sense and is an insult to any homeowner who exhibits pride of ownership. The only thing Mr. Chaffers is guilty of is maintaining his property so as to be featured in the centerfold of Sunset magazine.

If you are interested in correcting an injustice, I have established a fund to pay Mr. Chaffers' costs and attorney's fees. You may send your donation to: Tree Trimmers Anonymous, P.O. Box 1826, Monterey, CA 93942-1826. Any monies in excess of Mr. Chaffers' expenses will be donated to FOCUS (Friends of Carmel Unified Schools) and the Carmel Youth Center.

P.S. Would the alleged good citizen who not only videotaped Mr. Chaffers' misdeed, but also insisted on prosecution, please step forward for proper recognition?

Trimming sentence unbelievable

Dear Editor:

After finishing the article in last week's Pine Cone about the trimming of two small oak trees at Santa Lucia and Monte Verde, I could not believe what I had just read.

For the City of Carmel to charge Mr. Joseph Chaffers $500 and 20 hours of community service is unbelievable.

First of all, he trimmed the two trees to make them look better. The city should be paying him for his good work.

This Gestapo kind of thing does not belong in this village. If you want the citizens to run around reporting on their neighbors like they did in Russia and Germany, then we will really be in bad shape. Guess some people don't have anything better to do.

I would like every Carmel citizen to drive by the corner of Santa Lucia and Monte Verde, northwest corner, and see what all the fuss is about. Tell me what you see wrong. Then you will want to kick a few for stirring up this little nothing.

Treasuring the experience

Dear Editor:

The Carmel All-Star baseball team appreciates The Carmel Pine Cone's terrific coverage of the our experience in the Bronco World Series. The kids and parents really enjoyed the articles and photos. Many copies were mailed to the out-of-town family and friends of our players.

Pine Cone reporter Garth Merrill accuratcly captured and conveyed the feelings that the coaches and players were experiencing through the series. Cole Thompson's photographs showed both the pageantry of the pregame activities and the excitement of the games.

It was a wonderful adventure — and copies of Pine Cone articles will help us remember and appreciate it.

Above the law?

Dear Editor:

The Pine Cone's July 28 editorial holding the Carmel City Council accountable for the illegal granting of photocopy services was excellent.

Does Mayor White believe that because he ran unopposed that he can do anything, regardless as to whether it is legal?

Does he think that because he is mayor, he is above the law?

Why do we pay nearly $150,000 per year for an administrator and legal counsel when their professional recommendations are ignored and rejected?

Every member of the council took an oath to uphold the laws of our city when they took office. As the leader of the council, Mayor White embarrasses his city and shows disdain for his oath by saying "While we may not be legal . . ." You had better be damn sure you are legal — that's your responsibility in

Advisory committee consolidation goes against democratic principles

AFTER A period of discussion and a number of public hearings, it is well known that on Aug. 23 the Monterey County Board of Supervisors voted 3-2 to approve the consolidation of our citizen advisory committees from 18 to 10.

What may not have been fully appreciated, however, is that the approval means the end of total local involvement in land use matters by those people most directly affected.

Sam Karas

In voting against consolidation, both Third District Supervisor Tom Perkins and I felt strongly that such a move works against the basic principle of any democracy, which is to encourage more participation in government by its citizens.

By reducing the number of advisory committees, we are limiting a number of people participating in the process. Also, it was our belief that consolidation would end the participation of people who reside in the affected areas and who have an excellent knowledge of it. We also believed that consolidation would cause committee meetings to be held more often and to last longer.

Both Supervisor Perkins and I argued that the problems in Upper Carmel Valley and Lower Carmel Valley are different in nature and scope. The same fact exists when one considers the issues affecting the Carmel Advisory Committee and the Highlands-Bixby Committee. Both have different issues which require time and effort on everyone's part to resolve. To consolidate these four groups may prove more costly than was intended.

In stating their case for consolidation, proponents emphasized the need to streamline the process, and they claimed consolidation would prove more efficient. A county staff member would be available to help address advisory committee members' question immediately. I do not question this wisdom; however, for years these advisory committees operated admirably without staff being present. I am sure they can continue to do so.

As to consolidation being more efficient, I have found there are times when such moves are actually more costly and less efficient. In fact, the present advisory committees, because of their local knowledge, are efficient in their operations.

Recently, I placed a dollar value on the hours volunteered by committee members and was surprised to learn that it totaled more than $100,000 in savings to our taxpayers. To those present committee members, we owe a great debt of gratitude.

Value is evident

Prior to becoming supervisor of the Fifth District, I had little knowledge of the workings of these citizen advisory committees. But it did not take me long to learn that all those involved are caring local residents who are willing to volunteer many hours to advise on and help resolve planning matters.

Appointed by members of the Monterey County Planning Commission, these volunteers had to master their area land use plan as well as other major county land use policies. Contrary to some reports, they always attempt to treat every applicant fairly and evenly. As with any land use issue, disagreements arise, but I feel that at most times they are handled correctly.

The idea of consolidation is not a new one. In 1987, the Keenan Report, prepared by Gen. Tom Keenan, was requested by the board of supervisors to address and correct problems in our county planning department. At that time, we were receiving constant complaints from the community regarding the county permit process.

In the report, area advisory committees came under attack. But in the synopsis of comments responding to the report, it was stated that the area advisory committees are an important element of the review process, that Monterey County is extremely diverse, and that a reduction of advisory committees would diminish public participation necessary to ensure development conforms with local conditions and circumstances. It is apparent this statement was bypassed in the board's decision.

Will it work?

And so, on Dec. 31, all existing committees will be revised in accordance with the recommendations on consolidation. New committees could then be appointed if desired by the planning commission.

Whether consolidation will work remains to be seen. In fairness to all concerned, I hope that it will. I know the current committee members who disagree with the decision will continue to give their full efforts toward making consolidation work.

I do commend our county staff for their fairness in presenting arguments on this matter. I also thank those committee members for their objective testimony. We are fortunate to have such fine volunteers among us.

Sam Karas represents the Fifth District on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

decision-making.

Councilmember Fischer's comments about being willing to risk a court battle over this case are as equally ignorant. When you knowingly and willfully break the law, Councilmember Fischer, don't expect the citizens of Carmel to pay your legal tab. If the city gets sued over this, those members who voted for it had better pay for the legal expenses themselves. Consider it the price for dumb decision-making.

Appropriate use?

Dear Editor:

I have lived off Highway 68 in Corral de Tierra since 1951. No one asked my family or anyone else in the area if we had any objections to a race track close by.

One weekend in 1957, we heard the noise of race cars. We were told the track was on Fort Ord property and that the track would be used one weekend per year. Slowly, the use increased, as did the crowds. County officials would not or could not do anything because the track was on army property.

How did the racetrack come to be?

In the early 1950s, SCRAMP (Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula) sponsored a once-a-year race held in Pebble Beach. After a spectator was killed in 1956, Pebble Beach Co., recognizing a serious liability problem, said "no more."

SCRAMP looked for another location and spotted a relatively unused portion of Fort Ord. Congressman Burt Talcott assisted SCRAMP. He became the chief negotiator with the army and the Federal Government to allow a racetrack to be built on army property for a once-a-year event. He felt this was for the good of the community.

Construction on the racetrack began in 1957. The army even helped by using army bulldozers and G.I.'s Granite Construction Co. was hired to do the final grading and paving. It is our understanding that after being paved, SCAMP announced that it couldn't afford to pay, so Granite wrote off $100,000 of the debt in 1957.

In 1974, the Department of the Army gave the property to the County of Monterey as free land. Frankly, it became a liability for the army, as it was tired of having to provide security and have the G.I.'s pick up the beer cans after each race.

Since that time in 1974, the sports car races have come to include Indy cars and motorcycle races. The Monterey County Parks Department has allowed rock concerts, festivals, club racing, tire testing, racing schools, etc.

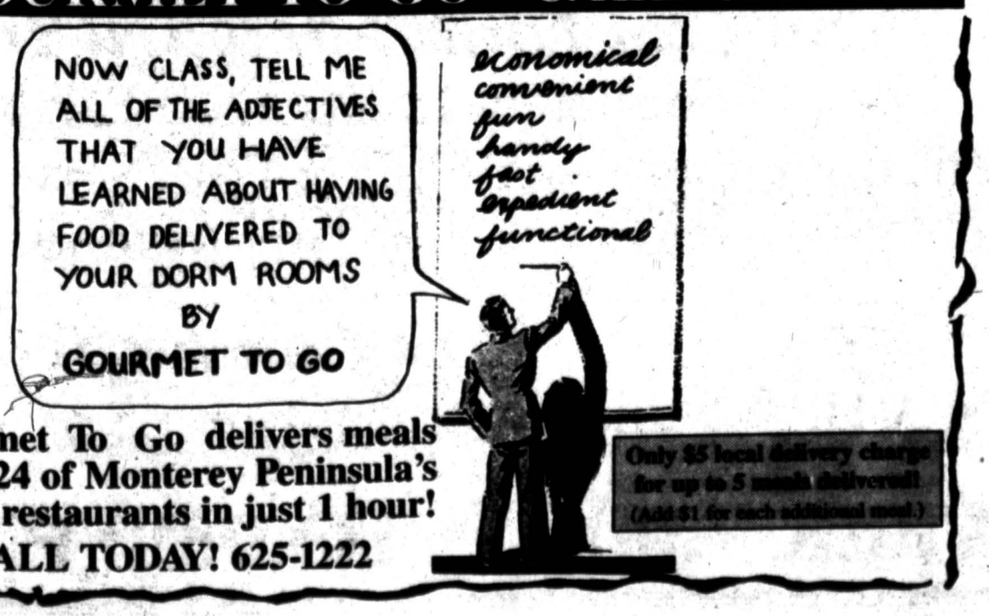

In speaking with Mr. Talcott last week, he was disappointed with what Laguna Seca has been allowed to become. At the time, he believed Monterey County would respond better to the community than the Federal Government. He pointed out that "Government is not a moneymaker; it is a supposed to be a servant.

Mr. Talcott said, "It was never envisioned to have that amount of use."

neers, teachers and artists – and have enriched the community which they love so much. And many who left have returned in retirement, and are now active in local government and community service.

Who's who

In fact, the guest list for the reunion reads like a veritable who's who of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Consider that four of the five Carmel City Council members are either CHS graduates themselves or are offspring or spouses of Carmel High alumni; Barbara Timmins Livingston (Class of '46); Phil Coniglio is the son of Carla Lepori Coniglio (Class of '46); Paula Hazdovac is the daughter of Lillian Ohm Hazdovac (Class of '41); and Bob Fischer is married to Marian Dowgiallo Fischer (Class of '46).

The city council recently recognized the significance of the reunion with a proclamation honoring alumni from the era.

"Congratulations to each of you on this occasion of Carmel High School's Grand Reunion," it read in part. "May reflections mellowed by time, and made magic by the warmth of old friendships and fond memories, envelop you as you commemorate your youth.

"Remember, too, the heart of any community is its people. A part of you will always be a part of Carmel."

Thatcher acknowledges that it's much different being an adolescent in Carmel today: "Our biggest thing was to roll pumpkins down Ocean Avenue," he recalled.

In retirement, Pete and Andrea Thatcher (a 1945 CHS graduate) have returned to the Monterey Peninsula after 48 years. They have spent nearly two years tracking down former classmates and organizing the event with other committee members.

What would the Thatchers say to those who may know of The Grand Reunion, but have reservations about attending?

In unison, they answered, "They're going to miss the party of a generation – a golden opportunity."

Fourth Annual Performance Carmel series announced

■ The eclectic lineup of entertainers will include the Kronos Quartet, Pickle Family Circus and San Jose Taiko.

By IVY WESTON

PERFORMANCE CARMEL, the contemporary dance, music, theater and spoken word concert series featuring one event a month for eight months at Sunset Center auditorium, is about to begin its fourth year.

Brian Donoghue, Community and Cultural Director for the City of Carmel, was the one who came up with the concept for Performance Carmel when he took the job four years ago.

Donogue, whose expertise was entertainment programming, soon noticed that Carmel offered plenty of live classical music concerts, but not much in the way of contemporary arts entertainment.

He also realized that the residents of Carmel and the Carmel City Council seemed interested in rejuvenating Sunset Center and upgrading its performance program.

So Performance Carmel was born, and has been a success ever since. "The crowds have been huge," Donoghue said. "Young and old are mixed together in the audience."

Kronos Quartet

Donoghue says he tries to bring performers that represent a variety of different performance art genres to Carmel. "What we try to do is be extremely eclectic," he said.

This year's Performance Carmel will open with the Kronos Quartet on Oct. 8. "They were our first group in our first series," Donoghue explained. "It's kind of a coming of age for the series to have them back."

The Kronos Quartet performs music from Shostakovich to Howlin' Wolf. It also commissions new works from composers from Zimbabwe, Poland, Australia, Japan, Argentina and Azerbaijan.

The next concert is Nov. 5 and features The Chameleons, a physical comedy duo that combines the arts of mime, circus and theater. The Chameleons have performed throughout the United States and in Europe.

On Jan. 7, the Pickle Family Circus will perform under the direction of its new artistic director, Tandy Beal, who has her own dance company and choreographed Tim Burton's film The Nightmare Before Christmas.

The circus features a unique blend of acrobatics, ballet, magic tricks and comedy, and is backed up by a jazz band.

Pickle Family Circus

Gospel, blues, R & B and country group the Holmes Brothers, who are well-known for their harmonies, will perform Feb. 4.

Actors Anthony Zerbe and Roscoe Lee Brown will perform a spoken drama entitled Behind the Broken Words on March 11. The program will include a collection of poetry, prose and song taken from works by e.e. cummings, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Dylan Thomas, Robinson Jeffers, T.S. Elliot and W.B. Yeats.

The Urban Bush Women, who use dance as a medium to decry racist myths and sexist stereotypes, express the "science" of hip-hop, and to send messages of anger, grief, determination and hope, will take the stage April 7.

San Jose Taiko, one of the nation's most highly respected Asian-American drum troupes, will perform

San Jose Taiko

African, Balinese, Latin, Brazilian and jazz rhythms May 13.

Performance Carmel coordinates outreach programs at Carmel High School, Monterey High School, Seaside High School and York School. These programs admit students into Performance Carmel shows at a reduced price.

The outreach programs are important, according to Donoghue, because they expose young people to many different types of performance art. "There's not as much arts education in the schools as there was 20 years ago. We've had kids enjoy the performances so much that they come back and help out back stage."

Performance Carmel shows will begin at 8 p.m., with the exception of the Pickle Family Circus (7 p.m.), at the Sunset Center auditorium. Further information can be obtained by calling 624-3996.

Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary's second birthday party set for this weekend

AN ENVIRONMENTAL fair with activities for kids and adults, live music, a boat parade and birthday cake are planned to celebrate the second birthday of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The celebration marks the second anniversary of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, designated in Sept. 1992 as the nation's largest protected marine region. The sanctuary stretches from the Golden Gate in Marin County to San Simeon.

All events are free, and will take place at Shoreline Park in Monterey, near the Coast Guard breakwater.

Festivities actually begin at 9 a.m. Saturday with a bike ride along the Monterey Recreational Trail to Fort Ord. Participants for the 14-mile ride, which is suitable for all ages, will meet at 9 a.m. at Lovers Point Park in Pacific Grove.

There will be several stops along the way to Fort Ord, and a snack stop at Seaside State Beach on the return trip.

Further information about the bike ride can be obtained by calling 659-6062.

Sunday's festivities begin at 10 a.m. with a parade of ships from Point Pinos (in Pacific Grove) to Monterey harbor.

Boats large and small are invited to take to the water and join Coast Guard ships in the aquatic procession, which begins at 9:45 a.m.

Information about joining the parade can be obtained by calling 647-7312.

Many of the ships, including Coast Guard vessels and research ships, will be open for tours during the day while they're docked at the Coast Guard pier.

More than 50 environmental organizations will have booths and activities along the recreation trail at Shoreline Park beginning at 10 a.m. Visitors can plant and take home pine trees, examine a life-sized whale model, touch live marine animals and take part in dozens of other activities at the booths.

Entertainment begins at 10:45 a.m. with a performance of "The Pollution Solution Kid" by the Monterey Bay Aquarium outreach education staff.

Other performances include music by the Monterey Community Band and Tropical Meuse Band, and the singing of "Happy Birthday" by students from Carmel Valley's Tularcitos School.

Birthday cake will be cut and served at 1:30 p.m., following brief remarks by local elected officials and other dignitaries.

Other activities include free face-painting from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and kayak demonstrations at San Carlos Beach.

Further information can be obtained by calling 647-4255.

Cinderfella Story continues as Greg of New Four Freshmen reports home about projects

IT WAS a real Cinderfella Story. A few years back, Greg Stegeman — jazz vocalist and musician by night, single father — struggled to raise two young sons.

Day jobs came and went. With his last spare cash, Greg put together a demo and "just for fun" sent it to old pal Bob Flanigan of the Four Freshmen.

Greg didn't know that Bob was about to retire. Inside of the month, Stegeman had a rehearsal schedule with The New Four Freshmen and went house-hunting at the group's hub city — Las Vegas.

He still thinks of himself as a Carmel Valley guy. And his letters sound like the same old Greg.

"The biggest and most recent news," he writes, "is the release of a brand new Freshmen album. It's Voices in Standards — a tribute to Frank Sinatra that features five of my vocal arrangements."

The session was recorded last November in New York City with the excellent Lew Anderson Big Band. On the Hindsight label, this package may be ordered through your favorite shop right about now.

"More big news," Greg says. "CBS Sunday Morning with Charles Osgood ran an eight-minute profile of the group in early August. A CBS camera crew followed us around the country for several months, culminating in an interview last June in Manhattan."

Then: "We also just completed an 'infomercial' with (TV actress) Rue McClanahan in The Big Apple. This should air in September and October."

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

We're talking DNA, MPC, PBS and George

MY SIGNIFICANT Other often teases me in the morning as I sit down to my bowl of bran, skim milk, raisins, sliced banana and artificial sweetener. "So, how's your ranch breakfast today?" he chuckles, and I, slurping in a ladylike fashion, tell him it's just fine, thank you.

As we all know, before there was a Denny's "Grand Slam" there was a "Ranch Breakfast," and it usually consisted of two or three just-out-of-the-hen-house eggs, a stack of plate-size pancakes, a slab of ham, a pile of toast with homemade preserves and a gallon of strong black coffee.

The idea was to 'stoke up'

It was designed for a ranch-hand who might get up at 4:30 a.m. and work steadily until noon. There was no espresso stand out on the range, and very few croissants available at mid-morning. The idea was to "stoke up."

Somewhere in the DNA of every American man is the genetic memory from that long-forgotten hired hand. When confronted with a menu that promises a mountain of food, and even provides pictures, most of the males I know will succumb.

Despite their cholesterol and triglyceride counts, they very much want to be that lean, rugged individual. They want to be James Dean in Giant.

All of the above is by way of explaining the brilliant idea I had this morning as I ate my plain-Jane morning meal: If "ranch breakfasts" are so inherently appealing, why not serve them at the Ranch? And surely, you know the ranch I'm talking about — Clint's place. The Mission Ranch.

If ranch breakfasts are so inherently appealing, why not serve them at the Ranch? And surely, you know the ranch I'm talking about — Clint's place. The Mission Ranch.

I think it could be a moneymaker. Early-rising locals could walk there and read their newspapers while enjoying the coziness of a real ranch dining room. And the tourists! Imagine the Europeans and Asians who grew up on Eastwood westerns, enjoying the real thing.

Never mind that those are sheep out in his pasture, not cattle, and the view is of ocean instead of rangeland. This is still the West that was won!

Oh well, it's one of those dark and foggy mornings as I write this. My coffee is instant, there isn't a checkered tablecloth in the house and I'd kill for a couple strips of extra-crisp bacon.

Changing the subject entirely (and it only seems fair to warn you), I had a sudden realization this past weekend that whoever wrote the story of the Three Bears must have lived with a man who had his very own spot on the sofa. I now know where that line, "Who's been sitting in MY chair?" came from.

The S.O. has such a spot, and while I'll sit there once in a while, I vacate immediately when he comes into the room with a book in his hand. When one of our seven assorted children comes to visit, it's very interesting to watch his reaction if one of them happens to take that place before he's had a chance to claim it.

If it's one of my kids, he tends to glower a bit, then perch uncomfortably on the edge of the piano bench. But this weekend it was his daughter who inadvertently settled into that nice cozy corner. It was interesting to observe "Papa Bear" arranging himself elsewhere, and even looking pleasant while he did it.

Long-stemmed red-haired beauty

What else comes to mind this morning? Regret ... that I'm too late in telling you to get to Monterey Peninsula College to see the musical Nine. The show, which closed this past weekend, was terrific, but the show-stopper was dancer Blaise Mills. "Local girl" fails miserably to describe this long-stemmed red-haired beauty whose body is absolutely fluid.

If by some stroke of luck MPC decides to extend the play's run, forget the nunnery. Get thee to the box office!

While I'm in a show-biz mode, I have a complaint to register with KQED (Channel 9), San Francisco's public television station. If they run The Three Tenors in Concert one more time, I will scream loud enough to ruin their signal.

I was one of those who watched the original broadcast several weeks ago, and reveled in the immediacy and intimacy of having Pavarotti, Domingo and Carreras performing live in my very own living room.

Sure, I was a little embarrassed by the fact that they hadn't prepared enough encore numbers to please the Dodger Stadium audience who simply refused to leave.

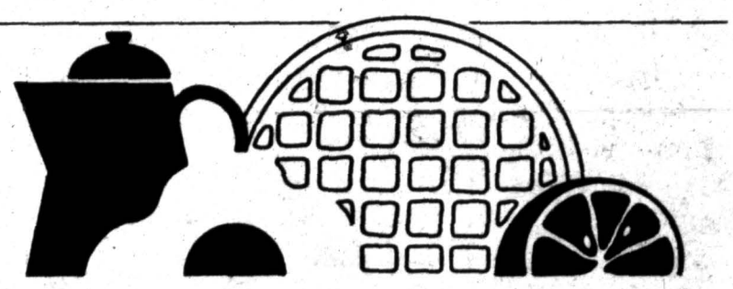

Every time the lads stepped back up to the microphones, I fully expected them to launch into "The Three Little Fishies," anything to break the monotony of repeating the same song over and over.

Just who is Yanni?

That was then. This is now. Every time I pick up the remote and flip past Channel 9, there they are. Ubiquitous, like Larry, Moe and Curly, and fast becoming as tiresome as Yanni at the Acropolis. (Perhaps you too are asking, "Just who is Yanni, and why can't he get out of Greece?")

Okay, so it's obvious that I'm not in the best of moods in the morning. It's probably due to lack of real food.

Anyhow, I've saved my last salvo for Coach Seifert, fearless leader of the San Francisco 49ers: George! Are you listening? Please, do something with your hair!

Santa Rosalia Festival to honor Monterey's rich Italian fishing heritage this weekend

THE 59TH Annual Santa Rosalia Festival will occur from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at Jack's Park in downtown Monterey.

First celebrated in 1935 when a statue of Santa Rosalia was donated to the San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey, the festival honors Santa Rosalia, the patron saint of Sicilian fisherman.

The festivities will begin with a small hometown parade, starting on Webster Street, that will include high school bands, fire trucks and local dignitaries.

The parade concludes at the end of Wharf #2, where the statue of Santa Rosalia awaits the blessing of the fishing fleet by the Roman Catholic Bishop of the Monterey Diocese.

Fisherman who have been lost at sea will also be honored at the ceremony. There will be an outdoor mass immediately following the blessing of the fleet.

At the conclusion of the mass, the festival area opens at Jack's Park with events including music by the Gaylords, Italian food delicacies and arts and craft booths.

In addition, five local high school-aged young women will participate in the Queen Coronation and Dinner on Saturday evening. The queen and her court assume an active role in all festival activities.

The festival is sponsored by the Italian Heritage Society. This is a local non-profit agency which educates the public about the rich Italian culture in Monterey that was begun by the early Italian immigrants, who came here to work in the fishing industry.

Further information can be obtained by calling 649-6544.

'Killers' is stomach-turning, riveting study of societal decay

■ The controversial film is less a breakthough in experimentation for director Oliver Stone than it is a culmination of his now-familiar technique.

Woody Harrelson with Juliette Lewis, from 'Natural Born Killers.'

By CRAIG ARNOTT
Review Movie Critic

NATURAL BORN Killers, Oliver Stone's bristling indictment of media-celebrated violence, turns out much like hyperactive kin to his other films.

Always letting his showmanship overrun his intellect, the director and his commando approach to filmmaking have never been as untethered as they are here. Natural Born Killers is a wild circus of images which leaves the audience reeling — perhaps impressed, perhaps never sure why.

Stone's film is a smorgasbord of technique, as he uses videotape, 16 mm film, animation and morphing technology.

Audience members may feel as though they are witnessing someone impatiently fingering the remote control.

The story of marauding fugitives Mickey and Mallory (Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis), however, isn't told with exceptional cleverness.

The pair are introduced as they wipe out the patrons and employees of a roadside diner, sparing one who must be kept alive to "tell the tale."

This first taste of the couple's casual destructiveness leaps from bland to arresting. A knife is shown somersaulting in slow motion into the chest of a panicked hayseed; a bullet teasingly lingers in midair before it finds its target.

Making his point

The cartoonish way the first scene is filmed illustrates the way violence has become a mundane part of society, but once that point is made Stone uses the rest of the film to beat it into the ground.

Mickey and Mallory go on a bloody romp, shooting policemen, a gas station attendant, a Native American and countless others as they proclaim their sordid love for each other.

A few slices of ingenuity remain.

Mallory's tormented childhood is seen through sitcom eyes in a droll piece called "I Love Mallory," in which Rodney Dangerfield plays her abusive father.

His cruel insults are highlighted by a laugh track, and when the volatile Mickey is introduced (delivering a dripping package of meat), Dad soon finds himself head down in the fish tank while Mom is set on fire in her bed.

Strange program

Once the pair begin their spree, they attract the attention of the tabloid TV show "American Maniacs" and its spastic Australian host Wayne Gale (played exceptionally well by Robert Downey Jr.).

Mickey and Mallory become the homicidal darlings of the airwaves, and their movements are traced with an almost religious fervor by the media and, consequently, the public.

Mickey and Mallory become more like symbols than actual characters, and Harrelson and Lewis portray them effectively even though it's like acting in a box.

Their backwoods drawls and unapologetic white trash behavior are credible and important to the audience's suspension of disbelief.

Aside from the inspired sitcom spoof and the "American Maniacs" segments, Natural Born Killers is a surprisingly routine observation of contemporary violence.

Audience members may feel as though they are witnessing someone impatiently fingering the remote control.

Satiric moments are scattershot and fleeting, lost in the dizzying scramble of images.

The violence itself moves quickly from the orchestrated carnage of the first scene to a narcotic haze of 45 degree camera angles and creative lighting.

Stone, always as subtle as a brick, doesn't so much condemn the violence as bathe in it.

Battering the senses

Music is crammed into nearly every frame, further battering the senses with arias, industrial noise and hard rock.

The rough but soothing vocals of Leonard Cohen, which frame the story, are a calming ointment on the wound.

For all the criticism, Natural Born Killers is definitely one of a kind.

Some may liken its hyper-audacity to a very expensive student film, but it manages to sustain interest and provoke debate. These are, unquestionably, this directors true strengths.

Janet Greene, Leah Berg, Irene Joseph, Hella Langer and Katy Curry helped celebrate Hella's 94th birthday at her shop in Carmel recently

Designer's Showcase gala event slated for Sept. 29

THE WORD is out! And what a word! We're going to have a fantastic Gala! Working harmoniously together, the Carmel Heritage Society and the Alliance on Aging Auxiliary (AAA) have planned a superb benefit — A Designers Showcase to be held at Flanders Mansion to benefit the Alliance on Aging Auxiliary. How is that for people helping people helping people?!

After imbibing delicious tea and cakes catered by Patricia Gentry at the fabulous home of Carmelite David Austin, AAA co-chairs Dennise Banta, Edie Karas first thanked Adele Rognlien and Elaine Berman for donating money to the Auxiliary. They then thanked Lyn Provost for her great work in helping the AAA achieve their goals and announced dynamic plans for the marvelous showcase — "A Romantic Restoration in Carmel-by-the-Sea"— with approximately 28 interior designers, and seven landscape designers. After the gala kickoff event from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 25, at Flander's Mansion, the showcase will be open Wednesdays through Sundays during the month of October from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Flanders Mansion in Carmel affords a commanding view of Mission Trails Park, the Carmel Mission and Point Lobos. Built in 1925 at a cost of $75,000, developer Paul Flanders and his wife, Grace, named it "Outlands," and lived there until 1967. The building is currently owned by Carmel Heritage, who has graciously allowed all the designers to redecorate the rooms, which will be called "Entrance Terrace, Lady's Fantasy Boudoir, Summer Loft, Flower Arranging Room" and others. Some of the landscaping projects include the "Garden of Tranquility, Jade Creek and English Knot Garden." Sound delightful?

After the Gala, lunch for $15 per person (and $12 for seniors) will be served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesdays through Sundays and will be provided by Michael's Catering. Artie Early is planning special events and well-known professional lecturers will speak at 4 p.m. every Wednesday. They will include Patricia Gentry speaking about "Teatime Celebrations," Tina Martinez, on "Faux finishes Are Fabulous," Suzanne Von Drachenfels, whose topic will be "Sensational Settings" and Frederica Clark and Guy Rodriguez talking on "Herbs and More." Dolores Gunia plans to have fashion models showing '40s and '50s-style outfits during the Gala luncheon. Ron Weitzman will provide music, Carli Short will chair the food service and a gift shop operated by Caspia Flowers and Fine Goods of Carmel will be open daily.

For more information and advance ticket sales, call 655-1334. This promises to be one of the finest charitable events of the year!

Hella Langer's 94th birthday

"Excuse me, " she said, "My customer is trying to get by."

I did not have to attune my hearing aid because her voice was so crisp and clear. Then, after we had moved aside, she asked the customer, "How may I help you?"

Who is she? Why, Hella Langer, of course! She was celebrating her 94th birthday while working at her shop on Dolores Street, which is simply called "Langers Antiques," where she has been for 38 years.

"To what do you owe your longevity?" I asked the petite shopkeeper. "Well, I enjoy life and I have a glass of champagne every day. It used to be wine, but due to the acidity, I changed to champagne. I am used to it. I come from Karlsruhe, you know, which is in the heart of the Moselle country in Germany."

As I drank my champagne and ate some of the delicious hors d'ouvres, I watched her work for a while and realized that it wasn't just the champagne...it was her. She is an indomitable spirit who does not need to stop working. Her assistant, Janet Greene, said that Hella has been going back to Europe all alone for 38 years to purchase new antiques for the store and will continue doing so. Hella has been in this country for more than 50 years.

It was good to see Carmel councilwoman Barbara Livingston, and Hella's niece, Irene Joseph, longtime Carmel resident Katy Curry and Leah Berg all there to congratulate Hella, who also received a plaque from the City of Carmel.

What will they give her next year? How about a trip around the world? No! A vacation would kill her. They should enlarge her shop so that her carriage trade customers can have more room to browse among the lovely antique bric-a-brac and statuary there. Vive La Langer forevermore!

Co-chairwomen Edie Karas and Dennise Banta welcome members to a tea held recently at the gorgeous home of David Austin to discuss the Designer's Showcase, a benefit for Alliance on Aging Auxiliary. The gala opening is set for Sept. 29 at Flanders Mansion.

AAA President Dennise Banta, host David Austin, co-host Rosalind Kidder and co-chair Edie Karas pause for a cup of tea at the AAA Tea Party.

Beverly Lenz, Barbara Hammond of Carmel Heritage, and Randi Roberts sip tea at the David Austin home.

Knee-slapping Monterey Civic Club bash

It was knee-slapping, boot-kicking swing and twirl that the Monterey Civic Club's Labor Day Country Western Line Dance and Barbeque Party threw for its members at Historic Monterey's House of Four Winds Sunday.

All the "dudes" dressed in cowboy hats, shirts, silver belts and buckles promenaded to Mike Noonan's guitar and songs of the West.

Highlighting the evening was a country line dance demonstrated by some of the members. Toeing the line were Lucille Scholefield, Gloria Costa, Erika Da Silva and Carol McCraney. Although this writer could not identify which dance was which, they later identified the steps as "Elvira, Romero and Exotic Cowboy." Costa, who also helped with the decorations — including a blue howling coyote on each table — said that they even had a dance called "Tush Push."

And what a barbecue! There was chicken and braised beef, with a humongous potato for each plate. Topped off with a great selection of pastries, it was hard to push away from the checkered tablecloths.

Emceeing the affair was chairman Lois Herschede, who hawked tickets for door prizes, along with Da Silva.

Even though the women outnumbered the men on the dance floor (my photographer danced with many), a good time was had by all.

The Monterey Civic Club (MCC) was organized back in 1906. Then, 34 ladies held a preliminary meeting in the room of the Library Association on Pacific street to organize a Civic Club. It was formed to act in conjunction with the Monterey Merchants Association for the welfare of the community.

Since its inception, many important subjects were addressed, such as the following items: footpaths and bridges, unsanitary conditions in school restrooms, closing saloons from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m., and enforcement laws forbidding slot machines and the dumping dead animals on the beach.

In 1907, the MCC was interested in a fund-raising event in the form of a charity ball. By March 23rd of 1914, the fund raisers had enough money to buy the House of Four Winds...Cost: $500.

Their most famous charity event is the pre-lent and historic Cascarone Ball, a costume dance with a Spanish-California theme. The next one is scheduled for February 25 at the Hyatt Hotel.

Pre-Monterey Jazz Festival series continues at Spanish Bay

The group started the year with a world tour that included stops in Holland, Sicily and Japan. This month they go back to Holland.

"My biggest personal news," Greg advises, "is a brand new marriage. I met Vicky at Fat Tuesdays in Manhattan in January of 1993 and we managed to meet several times on the road thereafter and fell madly in love. She's a beautiful and talented lady and we are very happy."

Finally: "I still miss my friends and the beauty of the Monterey Peninsula. Please give my very best to all who remember me there."

Done.

Still in the chair

We don't often cover business news. But, hey, this is about The Jazz Exec.

Saxophone-playing Philippe Kahn — of Borland International in Scotts Valley — survived a challenge. Shareholders overwhelmingly re-elected him chairman of the board despite opposition from two major investors: California Public Employees Retirement System (Calpers) and the College Retirement Equities Fund.

The talented and controversial Frenchman got 94 percent of the 20 million votes cast in Redwood City. Borland lost $69.9 million in its last fiscal year.

The opposition charged that Kahn, among other things, used company funds to produce jazz CDs which then were sent to Borland customers. Company officials said he paid back money used in this way and for personal travel.

"We don't know enough to tell them that Kahn should be out of there," said a Calpers official, "since they may have no one better. All we are saying is that we're not happy with what's going on."

Kahn studied with jazz reedman Paul Contos. I've heard one CD by the chairman — a crisp effort that featured some of his own writing and first-rate people like Contos, Richie Bierach on piano, Billy Hart at the drums.

Borland is betting heavily on product development. A key programmer over there is jazz keyboardist Murray Low.

Series time

Monterey Jazz Festival ain't far off. So producer Richard Armbrust's annual pre-MJF jazz series kicks off Monday evening in The Dunes Restaurant at Spanish Bay.

THE AVENUE

'The Avenue is the place to be'

DINING AT Carmel's new restaurant — The Avenue — is a wonderful, carefree experience.

The Avenue's cozy ambiance is created by the Comstock cottage-style adobe, which was designed in 1925, for Carmel Bohemian author Harry Leon, by Edward G. Kuster.

The historic building was remodeled by Walter Georis, who owns and designed Carmel's Casanova restaurant on Fifth Street.

French doors and warm honey-colored walls inset with European ceramic plates make the interior light and airy. A fireplace, flagstone floors, woven rattan chairs, soft wall lamps and sunflowers on every table complete the decor.

The attentive service at The Avenue adds to a relaxing dining adventure. And, of course, the cuisine is first-rate. Executive Chef Scott M. Kloster comes to The Avenue from the four-star Four Seasons Clift Hotel in San Francisco.

Carmel is a welcome change for Kloster.

"I was tired of hotel life," he said. "I wanted to work in a smaller environment, and this seemed like the area to do it in. I don't miss the city at all."

The Avenue's wine list boast a selection of local wines, including Bernardus Vineyard of Carmel Valley.

Beautifully presented, the appetizer of dungeness crab and scallion cakes were served drizzled with a toasted sesame and cilantro chile sauce with Carmel Valley greens on the side and chopped scallions sprinkled around the plate's rim.

The warm, creamy goat cheese fritter appetizer was equally delightful. A goat cheese disc, coated with Japanese rice noodles that puff when cooked, was set atop dressed organic field greens.

My companion's entree, angel hair pasta al fresco, was a light yet satisfying meal. The homemade angel hair was laced with tomato sauce and fresh sliced zucchini, eggplant, lots of basil and the smallest, most flavorful cherry tomatoes I've ever tasted.

I chose the roasted range chicken breast served on a bed of fresh vegetables and mashed potatoes, surrounded by a light lemon-thyme sauce.

After dinner, we enjoyed cappucinos served with mini biscotti cookies along with a bittersweet chocolate profiteroles — fresh-baked chocolate cake puffs, dusted with powdered sugar, split down the middle and filled with homemade vanilla bean ice cream.

Swirls of fudge, vanilla and raspberry sauces circled the cakes out to the edge of the plate, which was dusted with cocoa.

The Avenue's lunch menu also offers an exciting list of choices, such as goat cheese and sun-dried tomato ravioli with sauteed wild mushrooms, basil pesto and parmesan cheese and a barbecued sirloin salad.

The Avenue is fast gaining the popularity it deserves.

"If someone walked in right now, we'd have to turn them away," Kloster said. "We've been very lucky with the response, given the short time we've been open."

CTB/McGraw-Hill seeks to improve art education programs

■ Company hopes exhibit of student works encourages schools to strengthen arts curriculum.

By IVY WESTON

THE IDEA began when local educational test publishing company CTB/McGraw-Hill moved in Jan. 1993 from its Garden Road facility into a new building at 20 Ryan Ranch Road in Monterey and noticed that although the building was quite nice, the walls were fairly bare.

It was obvious that wall art was needed. Although an initial proposal was to invest in fine art for the building, employees seemed to want student art. CTB/McGraw-Hill President David M. Taggart agreed with them.

"We wanted to get something up to improve the environment, but also to support our commitment to arts in education."

CTB/McGraw-Hill is a division of McGraw-Hill, a company which publishes magazines and texts for the college and professional market. CTB/McGraw Hill publishes educational tests, like the CTBS standardized test for grades K-12, as well as professional licensing tests.

CTB/McGraw-Hill helps the Lyceum of Monterey County, an agency which provides the local community with enrichment classes, publish its brochures. Therefore, CTB/McGraw-Hill used its existing link with the Lyceum to enact a four-weekend art workshop in June for children ages six through 11, and to hang the art that resulted.

"This was a way to work with the Lyceum, work with kids, and at the same time, tie it all in with what we do here," Taggart said.

Ten children took part in the workshop, which was held in the CTB/McGraw-Hill cafeteria. Each workshop day, the children worked in a different genre. The first was pen and ink, the second chalk pastels, the third was tissue paper ink transfer and the fourth, watercolor.

The result is 54 framed pieces of art, hand-matted by the workshop's leader, Lyceum art instructor Jim Sarno, that now hang in various floors and halls of the CTB/McGraw-Hill building.

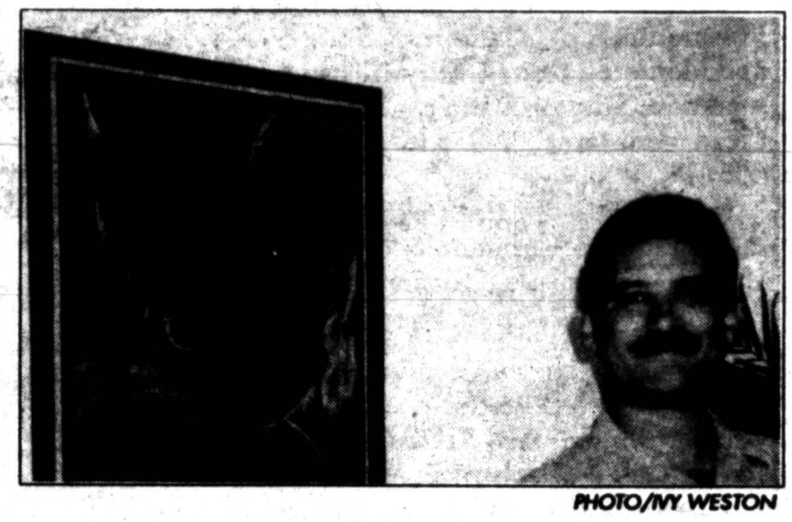

Sarno deserves a lot of the credit for the success of the workshop and the fact that many of the art looks as if it had been done by much older students. "He has a personal interest in inspiring children's creativity and self-esteem," said Laura Hurley, administrative assistant to Taggart and Chair of the Arts Committee.

According to Hurley, Sarno gave his students concepts to visualize that would get them out of the present and into a creative mode. In one class, he had the children close their eyes and imagine they were on a plane that landed in a tribal village. He then asked them to use chalk pastels to describe the patterns they saw.

At the end of each class, Sarno asked the students what they learned that day, and he has transcribed these comments into a brochure that will be handed out at an opening night reception Friday from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Sarno himself had a great experience as leader of the workshop, and has received positive feedback from CTB/McGraw-Hill employees. "The response has been incredible. To hear everyone's responses has been exciting,."he said.

All local superintendents, administrators and principals have been invited to the reception, and will be asked to fill out a questionnaire about how they feel arts education can be improved in their schools. Hurley hopes this will lead to more workshops. CTB/McGraw-Hill also has an idea to have a liaison attend school assemblies to facilitate workshops and other school arts programs.

Jim Sarno poses proudly beside a student's drawing.

These are important, Hurley said, because arts education is diminishing in the schools. She has been looking into working with arts organizations, such as the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and the Monterey Cultural Center, that have outreach programs with schools.

For the young artists, "the reception will be very exciting," Hurley said. "We will have framed certificates for every child who participated, to reward their achievement."

The young artists to be honored at the reception are Jessica Agee, Jessica Dixon, Justin Farr, Melani Fisher, Travis Fisher, Jed Galutira, Joshua Gamma, Nathan Gillard, Stephanie Hurley, Justyna Maslowska, Heather McColl, Shannon McCall, Kelly McKenna, Meggan McKenna, Jack McCrone, Amy Nelson, Andrew Nielsen and Stephanie Sosinski.

Further information about the exhibit or reception can be obtained by calling 393-7836.

RENTING VS. OWNING: Taking the quantum leap

REAL ESTATE experts agree — now is a good time to buy a home.

We currently are in one of the most attractive real estate markets for first-time homebuyers in decades. Home prices in many areas have become more affordable. Interest rates remain relatively low. And, lenders are offering a wide variety of mortgage products that make qualifying for a home loan even easier.

Yet, many renters are still sitting on the sidelines. Why? Many assume the American dream of home ownership is just that — a dream. They haven't taken the time to evaluate their personal financial situations and explore the many benefits of home ownership.

Renting may be more convenient and cost-effective in the short term, but history reveals that buying a home may be the wisest financial decision you can make for the long term. Home ownership not only offers many lifestyle advantages, it also provides the opportunity to realize significant tax savings and to build equity.

One of the best reasons to purchase a home is that real estate traditionally has proven to be a great investment, points out Ilyce R. Glink, author of 100 Questions Every First-Time Home Buyer Should Ask.

See OWNING page 48

California Trends

By BRADLEY INMAN

Will go-go '80s give way to decade of depreciation?

ON AVERAGE, in 1988 a home was purchased every 45 seconds in California. More home sales were closed in that year than in any period since 1979, which spawned wild home price inflation.

Consequently, most California single-family homeowners were fat and happy, enjoying an unprecedented surge in their net worth due to house appreciation. Collectively, their equity jumped an estimated $150 billion, which was comparable to the GNP for Taiwan that year.

But these were paper profits and just like a stock that jettison ups and then stumbles, in the last six years some of those home equity gains from the late 1980s have been lost.

In many cases, the entire run up from the go-go 1980s and more has been wiped out.

Take the mansion in Beverly Hills, tracked in an obscure home price survey conducted by researchers at California State Polytechnic University in Pomona, which examines 225 individual homes in California. Appraised at $2 million in April of 1988, it is worth only $1.45 million today.

In the same survey, a Santa Monica bungalow appraised at $285,000 in the spring of 1988 is valued at $265,000 today. A San Francisco single-family home valued at $540,000 in 1988 is worth $490,000 now and a tiny Seaside house that was appraised at $105,000 in 1988 is currently worth $104,000.

Ahead in the game

Nevertheless, on average, California homeowners are still ahead. The mean price of a Southern California home, according to the Cal Poly survey, was appraised at $192,607 in April of 1988. By 1990, that home was worth a whopping $274,752. In the last four years, the price fell $51,098 to $223,654. The net gain over the six years is an estimated $31,047.

The net gain in Northern California over the six-year period is $51,000 even though home prices have slipped $23,315 since 1990.

Indeed, most homeowners have weathered the cycle ahead of the game.

A Larkspur home that was appraised for $325,000 in 1988 is worth $530,000 today. A Hillsborough home that was valued at $735,000 is worth $880,000 today, and a Salinas house worth $115,000 six years ago is appraised at $125,000 now. An Alamo home worth $285,000 in 1988 is worth $435,000 today, and a South Sacramento home valued at $75,000 is appraised at $95,000 now.

In Oceanside, a $130,000 home in 1988 is worth $160,000 today, and in El Cajon a house valued at $140,000 now was worth $110,000 six years ago.

"If you bought a house in 1988 you are ahead, but if you bought it in 1990 you're behind," said Cal Poly professor Michael Carney who serves as executive director of the Real Estate Research Councils of Northern and Southern California.

Leveling off?

Most other home price data sources have reached the same conclusion. According to La Jolla-based Dataquick Information Systems, the median per-square foot paid for re-sale homes in California was $100 in April of 1988. That figure shot up to $135 by May of 1990 but has fallen to $114 today — still ahead of 1998 but down 16 percent in the last four years.

John Karevoll of Dataquick is one of the few researchers to conclude that the skid in home prices may have finally leveled off. Since March of this year, the per-square foot measure has gone up nearly a $1 per foot.

"It looks like stabilization," said Karevoll.

Others aren't so sure.

"An increase in home sales is a good sign but we don't see any signs of home price appreciation," said Cal Poly's Camey.

Charles E. Sewing, vice president and chief appraiser at Wells Fargo Bank, still sees "softness" adding, that "we just maxed out (in the 1980s) and we are still recovering."

Renting vs. owning — it's a numbers game

According to Glink, "Paying down a mortgage offers home owners an enforced savings plan. Every payment into the bank is part mortgage interest and part mortgage principal. That little bit of principal is called home equity and it adds up over time. When you sell the home, it becomes cash in your pocket."

But, what about making that hefty mortgage payment each month? The fact is that the difference between monthly rent and monthly mortgage payments may not be as great as you think. Consider this example:

You're renting an apartment for $600 a month. Over 30 years, you will have paid a total of $216,000 in rent! At the end of the 30-year period, you will have nothing to show for your "investment."

For comparison, $600 would roughly equal the monthly principal and interest payment on an $80,000 30-year home loan with a fixed interest rate of 8.5 percent. And with each payment, you're building equity.

For most first-time homebuyers, the challenge is not making the monthly mortgage payment — it's coming up with the down payment. Today, some lenders are offering mortgage products that require as little as 3 percent down. Most offer either 90 percent or 95 percent financing. And adjustable rate mortgages, with lower introductory interest rates, make qualifying easier. So, shop around for a loan product that meets your particular needs.
